WITH THIS, the first number of Vol. XIV, the new staff enters upon the proud duties of representing the Omaha High School. It is our earnest desire to place the REGISTER on the highest pinnacle of school journalism. We will endeavor to fill our pages with nothing but readable matter that will be of interest to the students and friends of the Omaha High School. With malice toward none and well wishes for all we make our bow.

THE SCHOOL is fortunate in the choice of Prof. Waterhouse to succeed Prof. Leviston as principal. Prof. Waterhouse comes from the Lincoln High School, where he is spoken of in the highest terms, and he is sure to make many friends in Omaha. Welcome, Prof. Waterhouse!

IT WAS with deepest regret that we learned just before the close of school last year that our beloved friend and principal, Prof. Leviston, would not be with us when school opened in the fall. Never was a teacher more generally loved by his pupils, for during his three years as principal, and his previous service as teacher, Prof. Leviston had won the hearts as well as the respect of all who knew him. Not only was the regret at his loss felt among the undergraduates, but also among those who had left the old school in previous years. But alas, he is gone and the REGISTER feels safe in asserting that Prof. Leviston has the hearty good will and the sincerest wishes of success, wherever he may be, of every student who knew him.

DREYFUS has at last been liberated, and although, technically his honor has not been vindicated, he stands before the world today free from suspicion. The verdict of Rennes was but the voice of a tribunal whose every move was directed by the military power, for the preservation of whose honor the innocent Dreyfus had to suffer his terrible banishment to Devil's Isle. Oh! what a lesson for every American school-boy in the story of that man's persecution. Therein is vividly portrayed one of the great dangers in the maintenance of a large military establishment in time of peace. Every boy should get the full significance of this lesson, for the time may not be far distant when those who are in school and college today may be called upon to decide once and for all whether our own beloved country, like France, shall suffer the "curse of militarism."

SCHOOL SPIRIT, that irresistible force, that when once aroused, makes every school enterprise a success, is either wholly lacking, or lies woefully dormant in our school. Of course there are a few who have shown their loyalty to the O. H. S., but these are in a vast minority. Were the school spirit once aroused in a school of our size the result would be truly marvelous. Athletics would thrive, Glee Clubs, String Clubs, and Debating Societies would be formed to provide wholesome entertainment and diversion for all. There is now a movement on foot toward the formation of a Debating Society, but there is not a word to be heard about a Glee Club or a String Club. Our high school life should not be one continual round of study and recitation, and there is much good to be had from the other phases of school life. The REGISTER believes that some school spirit should be aroused in the matter, and its pages are open to any plan for its development.

* * *

DURING our recent festivities it has been made clear to the ever-critical public that it takes nothing more than a pocketful of vari-colored, small-sized pieces of paper and a tin horn to make a half-grown boy or girl perfectly happy. Are we progressing, reader, when a boy in long trousers and a girl with her skirts down can only have a good time when he or she is acting in an ill-mannered fashion as possible? We have heard our grandmothers tell of the old-time "barbecues" when a whole town "turned out" to make merry, and we wonder if "Melissa" or "John" did not have just as good a time without the tin horn, rice and the impertinent wielding of the same. A high school boy or girl is not the only one compromised when he or she does things which are questionable; it is the whole school which suffers and if one's school is not to be guarded with a jealous care, is there anything that does deserve it?

Winning a Wife.

IN AUGUST of the year 1896 a party of us, consisting of three families, went camping across from Omaha Beach, on Lake Okoboji; a Mr. Jorgensen and wife with their daughter Alice; my uncle and aunt with their son Robert, who was about twenty-one years of age; and my father and mother and brother John, who was about to begin his last year at Yale, and my sister and myself. Alice Jorgensen was a pretty blonde with hair which had a tendency to curl. She was very fond of swimming and fishing and was quite an expert at both. My cousin and brother were both well-built, handsome young fellows, and each yearned for the favors of Alice, although she did not seem to care much for either.

John was on the boat crew of Yale and had already begun to train for the boat races of the following year. He was accustomed to row across the lake and back twice a day, once in the forenoon and again late in the afternoon. The lake is about two-and-a-half miles wide at that point and he usually rowed quite fast all the way.

One afternoon, toward the end of our stay, just before John started on his row he asked Alice if she would not like to swim out and meet him on his way back. Accordingly as he was about three-quarters of a mile from camp he saw Alice swimming toward him. He had not expected her to meet him so far from shore, but she had swum easily as there was a strong current at her back.

As John was about three hundred feet from her he saw her go down suddenly. He did not notice it, especially at first, thinking she had dived. But when she came up she barely came to the surface, and immediately sank again. Then he thought something was wrong, and rowing swiftly over to the place where she went down, he dived for her. He had to swim a little way under water for her, but he caught her by the hair and came to the surface.

He looked for the boat and saw it drifting towards the beach. He started to swim for it, but soon gave up as the boat was gradually getting further away from him. Just then Alice opened her eyes and winced as if from pain. Before long he had to tell her that he was very nearly exhausted and was making very little headway. She asked him to let her go and save himself, for she had hurt her foot and it would be too hard a task for him to get both ashore. He muttered "Never," and struggled on. Soon he said that they were not advancing any, and again she asked him to let her go. He said nothing but, turning on his back, caught her so that he could hold her easily and let himself drift towards the beach. For some reason, he knew not why, she made no effort to help him. This surprised and frightened him and he started to swim again, this time with the wind at his back and helping him towards the beach.

After awhile he spoke to her but received no answer. This frightened him still more and he swam harder than ever, until, at last, he had to rest. Taking very little rest he started on again. He kept this up, swimming and resting, thinking every moment that he could go no further. He kept it up in desperation and fear and he was so much exhausted that he scarcely knew what he was doing. So great was his agony of mind and body that it seemed hours and hours to him before his feet touched ground. When he did touch bottom, however, he staggered forward a few steps, carrying Alice with his last strength, and fell completely exhausted.

When, at last, he recovered consciousness he saw Alice lying unconscious on the ground just out of the water. There was a house at some little distance and he picked Alice up and carried her there. It proved to be the home of a doctor and, after examination, he found in Alice's foot a sharp point, which he said had been broken from one of the bones in the fin of a good-sized cat-fish. After hearing John's story of how she suddenly sank, he said she probably kicked a fish in the fin as he was passing her, for he said that the large fish seldom shied at anything smaller than a boat. The doctor said that such a wound was not dangerous but it was so painful that it would naturally take all the energy out of a person.

The doctor's house was but a short distance from the boat-house of the beach, so John walked over to get a boat in which to take Alice back to camp. He learned there that boats had been out looking for them all night as Robert had rowed over and given the alarm when Alice and John had failed to appear.

Alice recovered in a few days and showed much more pleasure in John's company than before the adventure. John recovered from all the physical effects of the adventure in a few days. He graduated from Yale the next June and was married to Alice the following fall. He still says sometimes that he won his wife by one night's hard labor although Alice says she would have married him anyway.

THEO. G. ROBINSON, '00.

Romance Among the Squirrels.

(From the Account of A. S. Quirrel.)
Dwight Pilsbry, 1900.

IT all seems so strange to me now, when I look back upon those times when I was attending the Squirrel University. There were seven of us that boarded together in a large, roughly built frame house on Maple avenue, Hanscom Square, one of the most celebrated districts of the metropolis of Nebraska. Six of us were young men, the seventh was a young lady named Miss Brown, who happened to be a friend of the landlady. I think she had more influence in holding us together than any one else. She was very beautiful, somewhat light complexioned, very lively, and had a large, handsome, bushy tail and fine, sharp teeth. Thus you can see that all of us fellows were very much attracted by her.

Young Bush fell in love with her the very first day, and it was no uncommon sight to see them frisking up and down the green at all hours of the day, when not attending school. He soon learned of her uncommon fondness for nuts, and so he went to a great deal of pains to find where some of us had hidden our winter stores. He had no scruples about helping himself to other people's property, and many a time we saw them seated on their haunches in some cool hiding place, eating our hard-earned savings.

As winter drew on her circle of admirers increased until it included Browntail, Lazybones, Silver Gray and Squawker. I, myself, withheld from the race because I considered that I should have no chance among so many gallant lovers. I hadn't run much with the crowd anyway.

The natural result was that jealousy sprang up among them, and Bush and Browntail decided upon an offensive-defensive alliance, agreeing that whichever could carry her away should have her, but that no one else could. Miss Brown scented danger in the air, so one day she pranced up to me and begged me to follow her wherever she went, and to protect her. Of course I didn't refuse this request.

One quiet day as I was following her from branch to branch, I noticed coming towards me Bush on one side and Browntail on the other. She was at the end of the branch and I was midway between her and the two rivals. They stood on different branches; Bush was making his toilet before presenting himself (he was a regular dude) and was as cool as if nothing was going to happen. Browntail, on the contrary, was much excited. He stood on his hind legs, thrashing his tail fiercely, holding his ears back and grinding his teeth with all his might. I was somewhat nervous also and my teeth began to chatter. The object of all this was on the very farthest end of the branch, huddled up in a miserable little heap. Silver Gray and Squawker were approaching from another tree. Lazybones was nearby, apparently asleep, but taking it in with sly glances.

When Bush had fixed himself up he dashed towards me, leaped over my head and was at her feet in an instant. I was on him before he could do anything and mussed his fur so badly that he had to go off and fix up again. He repeated this action several times until I had given him so much hard treatment that he no longer returned.

Meanwhile Miss Brown had fled, and when I found it out I went to follow, but I had to pass Silver Gray, Squawker and Browntail, who set upon me so fiercely that I thought all was up, but I gave Browntail such a blow that he lost his balance and fell to the ground. We thought that all the wind had been knocked out of him by the concussion, but he was able to crawl back to the tree and climb up. I had no more trouble with them and thought that the prize was mine. But I had a more subtle foe with whom to reckon. Lazybones had all this time been planning some trap for the winner. He found a same bag on the ground and brought it up to his perch. Here I noticed him stick his head into the bag and then he appeared to bring something out and eat it; instead of that he was putting something in. I saw him drop the bag, and thinking it contained something good, I jumped down ahead of him. Sticking my head in I came in contact with something sticky, and before I could loose myself I was jumped upon and hurt severely. When I recovered I was not much surprised to find that he had run away with Miss Brown, and that I had to look farther for my fair one.

"Won't it seem funny next year to write 19— after writing 18— for a hundred years," remarked a Freshmen the other day.

THE class of 1900 held its first meeting of the year Thursday, September 14th. Chas. B. Prichard was unanimously chosen president for the coming year. The other elections resulted as follows: Vice president, Bertha Philippi; secretary, Elizabeth McConnell; treasurer, Stebbins Teal; and last but not least, sergeant-at-arms, Rachel Lawton.

The first meeting of the Junior Class was held Friday, September 22nd. The meeting was called to order by President Jorgenson, and after the minutes were read it was thrown open for business. A new constitution was reported by the constitution committee, and Mr. Lewis delivered a very good speech in favor of Article 1, Section 2, which provided that all those who were registered Tenth Grade last year, but who had not sufficient points to be registered Eleventh Grade this year, were to be admitted to the class. After a lengthy discussion of this matter the constitution was adopted. The class then proceeded to the election of a program committee, and the following were chosen: Misses Florence Jordan, Isabel Baldwin and Josie Christians; Messrs. Burdett Lewis and Percy Powell. This committee is to serve for two months. Miss Adams was then re-elected class teacher and Mr. Lewis sergeant-at-arms.

The only sad feature of the meeting was the news received from Mr. Smaul that his son Frank, who was a member of the class of 1901, had died in Lexington, Mo.

At the next meeting a programme will be given by the class. The date will be announced later.

On Friday, September 22nd, the Sophomores held a meeting for the purpose of electing officers for the year 1899-1900. The meeting was conducted in a very business-like manner, and the following officers were elected: Arthur Kilkenny, president; Emma Schreiber, vice president; Fay Towne, secretary; Walter Hughes, treasurer. The Class of 1902 is to be congratulated upon their prompt organization of last year and its speedy re-organization this year.

The Seniors have applied to an eastern publication for the right to present one of their plays at the O. H. S. The play is up-to-date and is bound to take. It is to be presented the first Senior social.

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a Debating Society to compete in the contests held among the High Schools of the state, was held Monday, October 3rd. The meeting was temporarily organized with Burdette Lewis in the chair and Warren Hillis as secretary. Then followed a heated debate on the question of permanent organization. After much talk the matter was put to a vote which resulted in the postponement of permanent organization until a constitution had been adopted. The temporary chairman was instructed to appoint a committee to draw up a constitution, and the following were appointed: Arthur Kilkenny, Dwight Pierce, Warren Hillis, Arthur Scribner and Arthur Jorgenson.

"How would you like to be the ice man?" "I'd rather be the milk man and treat 'em white."

Competitive Examinations.

Editor Omaha High School Register:

DEAR SIR:—Competitive examinations for the vacant western and southwestern scholarship in New York University (Undergraduate College or School of Applied Science,) established in 1895 by Miss Helen Miller Gould, have been held this summer in some twenty cities or towns. Public-spirited teachers and pastors kindly consented to supervise the answering of the printed questions by the candidates. These answers have been graded by university officers with the result that the highest rank was awarded to the following:

WESTERN SCHOLARSHIP.

Guy Mabie, Eldorado, Kansas.94%
D. F. Barnett, Kansas City, Mo.89
Ellis Fink, Winfield, Kansas.87

SOUTHWESTERN SCHOLARSHIP.

F. B. Heartsill, Marshall, Texas.89%
A. L. Wilcox, El Paso, Texas.80
J. M. Clements, Fort Worth, Texas, 75

Accordingly Messrs Mabie and Heartsill are given the Four Years' Scholarships, each yielding $300 annually. The other four candidates also are each assigned by special gift a scholarship of $300 a year, for two years, it being required in one or two cases that a deficiency in languages be promptly made up.

The thanks of New York University are hereby returned to the examiners for their valuable help; to the many officers of railways who have taken an interest in the candidates, and to all others who have aided in making this competition so widely effective for good.

We bespeak the continued interest of our friends in the successful candidates and in future candidates for scholarship that may be vacant.

Will you please have the above report published in your local paper in order that it may reach those who may be interested in knowing its contents.

Sincerely yours,

H. M. McCracken,
Chancellor.

University Heights, New York,
September 11, 1899.

MOURNING.

WHEREAS, It has seemed best to Him who ruleth over all things, to take from our midst one of our most respected members, Frank Smaul, be it RESOLVED, That we, the members of the class of 1901, tender our heartfelt sympathy to the family in their bereavement.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, that a copy be placed in the records of the class of 1901; also that a copy be published in the High School Register.

Watch for Jorgenson's new book entitled "An Omaha Yankee Girl in King Arthur's Court."

Lovers of romance will be interested in Edna Hardy's new book "Hurr Ben."

Wm. Stephens has written a book in defense of militarism, "The Mind as a Factor in the Making of a Tactician."

Statesmen and diplomats are eagerly awaiting Lehymcr's great work, "My Reminiscence Constitution Making."

ATHLETICS

THE foot ball team is getting in shape to maintain the proud position that it attained last fall, and there is no doubt as to their ability to hold this position if they only receive the support of the school.

There are a few in the school who take a hearty interest in athletics in general, and especially in foot ball, but a large majority of the students are aware that the high school has a foot ball team, and that is about all. And those who care nothing for athletics are just the persons who should take part in them, for the body needs exercise and development as well as the mind, and the mind cannot attain its highest development without the assistance of a vigorous body.

Every afternoon finds a crowd of sturdy, long-haired, canvas-clad youths out on the campus practicing, under the watchful eye of Coach Whipple and receiving from him valuable instruction in the manly art of clean foot ball.

Several old and familiar players are seen again out on the gridiron playing in their old and battle-worn moleskins. Among them may be seen our faithful captain, Gene Tracy, also Guy Thomas, Chas. Prichard, Griffith, Englehard and "Dusty" Roberts. The most promising new candidates are Welch, McRay, Marsh, Seecrest, Parrotte, Taylor, Waller, and Randall.

The first game of any importance will be played with Tekamah, on October 14th. Following this there will be games with Lincoln, at Lincoln, Council Bluffs, Red Oak, Fremont, Tarkio College, Bellevue College, Tabor College, Malvern and probably Sioux City.

With good coaching, and the enthusiastic support of the pupils, as well as the faculty, there is no good reason why the scalps of all contestants should not be hung to dry in the broad and spacious halls of the old Omaha High School.

The Register understands that Frank Knight, a member of the Class of '98, is to return to the University of Texas and enter athletics. We wish Mr. Knight success in his undertaking and congratulate the school in securing such a competent man.

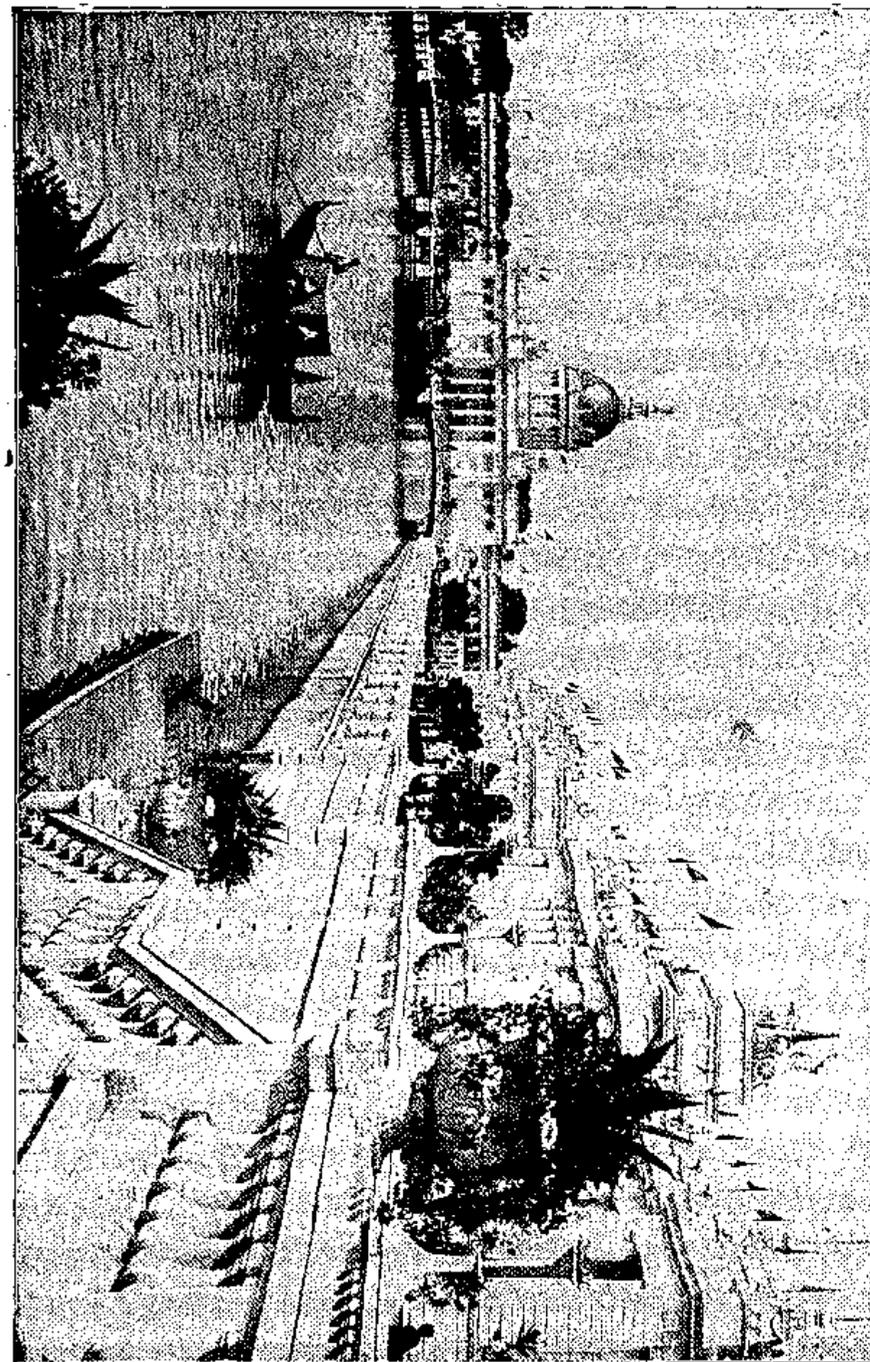

Boys and girls—everybody—join the Athletic Association. It costs you but ten cents a month and you are allowed a voice in all meetings of the association and the privilege of taking part in all athletic sports.

An A. A. meeting was held in room 48 Friday, September 29th, and considering the small attendance it was very enthusiastic. The time was spent chiefly in talking over the prospects of the football team.

The interest in athletics shown by Mr. Waterhouse and other members of the faculty very much pleased the boys. With this meeting as a starter, we hope to see the next one a grand success.

Notes From the Campus.

AMONG those who assisted Mr. Whipple in the coaching of the foot ball candidates during the month just passed were Clarence Estabrooks, Lewis Reed, H. M. Benedict, Nathan Bernstein, Will McKell and Lester Hutchinson.

Electrical Flower Beds—Greater America Exposition.

Our new principal, Prof. Waterhouse, takes great interest in the game. He is to be seen watching practice nearly every afternoon.

Al. Randall has been appointed captain of the second eleven.

"Snake Moore" still insists that he is the best "drawback" on the field.

"Tub" Freeman is captain of the Bellevue College team this year.

Thomas still wants to kick the ball.

They all wear porous plasters in the locker room.

Mr. H. M. Benedict.

Mr. H. M. Benedict, who was recently elected to the Biological Department, is well qualified for the position. He received the degree of B. A. from Doane College in 1894. In 1896 he received the degree of B. Sc., and in 1897 that of A. M. at the University of Nebraska. His thesis was on Zoology. During the last two years Mr. Benedict has been at the head of the department of Biology in the High School at Lincoln, Neb.

Prof. Benedict will also prove a tower of strength to athletics in the Omaha High School. He played second base on the University of Nebraska base ball team for four years, and is well versed in football and track athletics.

COME ye Freshmen,
Be good and strong,
Settin' up exercises
One hour long.

Soon you'll be mustered
In for regular drill;
Hheads up, shoulders back
Mind not some earnest trill.

Eyes to the front, heels together!
March with majestic stride,
Heed not the passing jeers,
But always of O. H. S.'s pride.

How about that eye, Reed?

Too much parade!

The night of the parade, or how I like to walk to the Expo.

Let's beat the Midway

How about Cairo, boys?

Have you noticed the wistful eyes of some of our last year's lieutenants?

We hope to have cases for our equipments soon and are waiting patiently.

A new company added to our battalion would be welcomed.

You had better not skip drill, boys.

There was a you man in our corps,
Who had never been drilling befops;

But they wanted to guide

His ungainly struide,

And they tride and truide

Till the young man he duide,

And the captain he sat down and swops.

It seems too bad that boys, coming from some of the best families in Omaha, should forget to return their equipments.
A gun and equipment may look well in a boys room, but is it right and honorable to do this when the companies are struggling to make a showing? Think of it, boys.

Men's Furnishings

Exchanges.

The Purple and Gold, Bellevue College, comes in a new style. It is very artistic and the illustrations deserve special mention.

People You Have Heard of.

The girl who burst into tears has been put together.

The young man who was taken by surprise has returned.

The young man who jumped upon the spur of the moment was soon glad to sit down again.

It is rumored that distance lent enchantment to the view and now the view refuses to return it.

The man who was moved to tears complains of the dumpness of the premises and wishes to be moved back again.
