This letter is addressed to the 1971-1972 Centralites because they are the originators of this yearbook.

No yearbook staff has control of the events of a particular school year or the people and settings that formulate all the events. We could photograph, we could enlarge, we could camouflage, sugar-coat, philosophize or distort, but we could not change the realities of Central. Because we did not want to attempt any alteration of Central, we focused upon the most basic and the most fascinating component we could find—the people of Central High.

We present in these pages a pictorial revelation of the individuals who are Central High and the building that surrounds them for nine months each year and haunts them for the other three.

The goals that you accomplished, the abstract or real things that you destroyed, the quirks that all Centralites are subject to, and your own individuality are what made Omaha Central High unique.

You were the routine.

You were the extraordinary.

You were the crudeness.

You were the creators of art.

You were the thundering in the halls and the irritating clicks of a ball point pen.

You were the humiliated heap at the bottom of the stairs and the performer on stage.

You were the butter on the railings and the charcoal sketch in the showcase.

You were the shrieking mob clothed in purple and white on Friday and in blue denim on Monday through Thursday.

You were the forged "Please-allows" and the author of un-ending in-class themes.

You were the "peace now" patches and the R.O.T.C. medals. You were the smoke pouring out of the bathrooms and the tardy check streaking towards auditorium home-room.

You were the crumpled REGISTERS strewn through the halls and the "ecology now" posters dangling on study hall windows.

You were the poker game during fifth hour and the economics stock project.

You were the S.A.T. admission ticket on Saturday morning and the "kegger" on Friday night.

You were the harmonica in the courtyard sunshine and the pep band blasting on the bleachers.

You were the scraggly pompons and the obscenities carved on the desk tops.

You were four dozen bleached blond mini-braids and a magnificent ebony Afro.

You were the snores in the back of the Algebra room and the pencil chomping during "pop" quizzes.

You were the shortened-day passes and the 3:15 stampede.

You were the O-book retakes and the funny captions that were censored.

You were the blue blazers and the mobile mountains of football gear.

You were the scores of eyes focused on clocks that never agreed—except that they were always wrong.

You were the fur-wrapped bundle by the radiators that were frigid all winter, but contributed a cacophony of rattles and gasps to the daily classes.

You were the half-dressed crowds in the locker rooms that smelled like last year's dirty socks and felt like the tropics.

You were the line-up at the water fountains that never gave cold water but were great for holding wads of stale gum.

You were the owners of warped wooden lockers with girlie calendars carefully hung inside.

You were the impromptu satire on the basement stairs and the aching muscles after each wrestling meet.

You were . . .
