beyond words

by Angela Splittgerber and Jennifer Insinger

As an incoming freshman or sophomore, entering high school for the first time can be a very nerve-racking but rewarding experience. For sophomores, the focus is on getting a license and driving a car.

Juniors work diligently to make the grade, while seniors anxiously await graduation in May.

All the students at Central know that high school is an exciting experience.

Students join clubs and participate in sports and activities. Central students also strive for good grades in their classes.

The first day of school, Spirit Week, Homecoming, midterms, Fall Play, Winter Musical, Winter break, New Year's Day, first semester finals, Roadshow, Spring Break, more midterms, Prom, final finals, graduation for seniors, and the last day of school for underclassmen are all memories never to be forgotten. It is hard to describe some of these memories. The 1993 O-Book uses pictures to show that the Central experience is truly beyond words!

Summer Travel

by Jennifer Insinger

While some students were lounging in front of the television cheering on their favorite contestant on The Price is Right, other students from Central were traveling in foreign countries during the summer.

Two groups from Central, one with Miss Ryan, and the other with Mrs. Fellman traveled to Europe in June.

Mrs. Fellman took nine students to England, France, and Switzerland. The trip included the French-speaking part of Europe and the group also spent half a day in Monaco.

Miss Ryan, Mr. Martin (English), and Mrs. Dusatko, along with approximately 30 students traveled to England, France, Switzerland, Italy, and Greece.

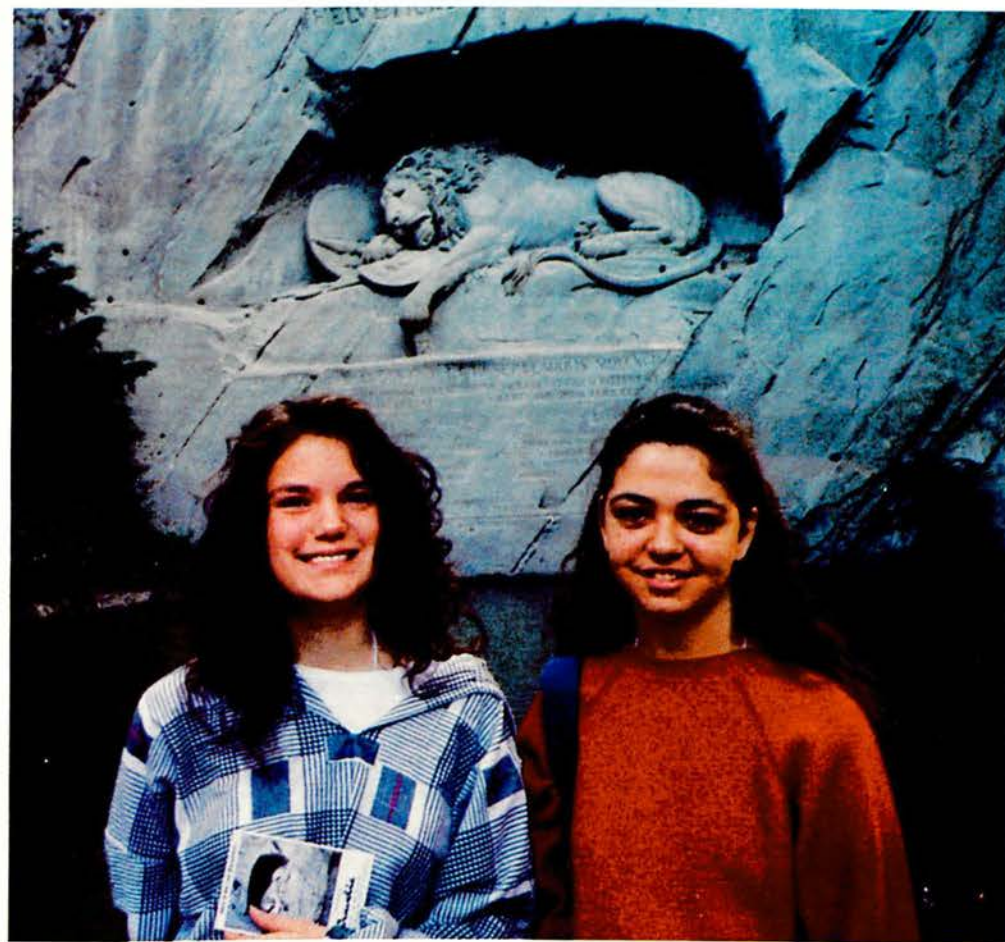

There were several mishaps during their trip. Miss Ryan fell victim to a speeding bicyclist, the group was lost in Paris, and they encountered a bomb threat in London.

Their trip also included a cruise from Italy to Greece across the Mediterranean Sea.

Some students found plenty to keep them busy right here in Omaha. Mario Henderson (12) played baseball for Central's summer team.

Central Spirit Week

How far would you go to show your school spirit?

by Jennifer Insinger

Many students during the week of September 28- October 2 dressed in bunny-slippers to bell-bottoms during Spirit Week!

Monday, September 28: Pajama Day- Students came to school with robes, nightgowns, slippers, curlers in their hair, and teddy bears in their arms.

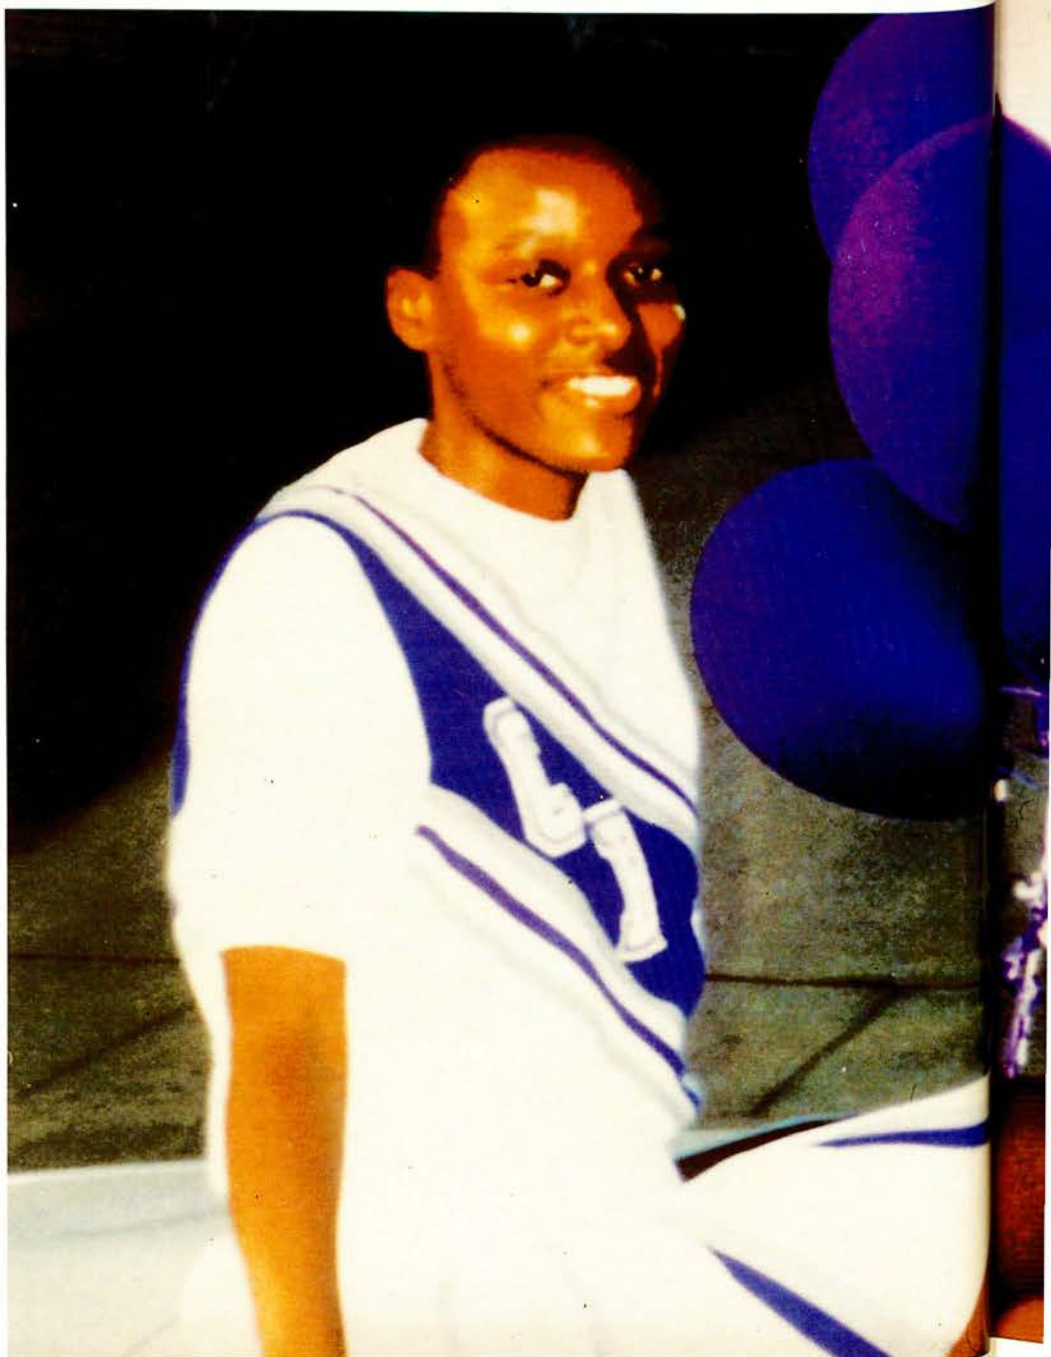

Tuesday, September 29: Psychedelic/ 60's Day- Plaid bellbottoms, platform shoes, and paisley shirts were the regular sight on this day.

Wednesday, September 30: Kris/Kross Day- Central students dressed backwards.

Thursday, October 1: Sports Day/ Teacher Dress Down Day- Students dressed to support their favorite team by wearing caps, shirts, jackets, and boxer shorts. Teachers came to school in jeans, tee-shirts, and tennis shoes.

Friday, October 2: Purple and White Day- On this day students wore purple and white on their clothing, face, and in their hair.

Spirit Week was topped-off with the Homecoming Parade on Friday evening.

Money -VS- Knowledge

by Jennifer Insinger

If you could have a weekly salary which gives you money to buy CDs and pay for gas, or a high school education which could prepare you for college and a career, which would you choose?

Students with jobs frequently have to decide between a paycheck or that precious seven hours of sleep that they would otherwise be spending on homework.

"I hate working late, but I need the money. I've got car payments and I have to pay for college," said Maria Hernandez, senior.

Money is the key motivator for teenagers. Students are willing to sacrifice their well-being and sanity for a weekly paycheck.

Having a job can teach a student responsibility and time management.

At midnight, a night's sleep looks much more inviting than mulling over algebra equations.

It is perfectly clear that with approximately 75 % of the student body working, money is speaking louder than knowledge.

Students

beyond control

by Angela Splittgerber

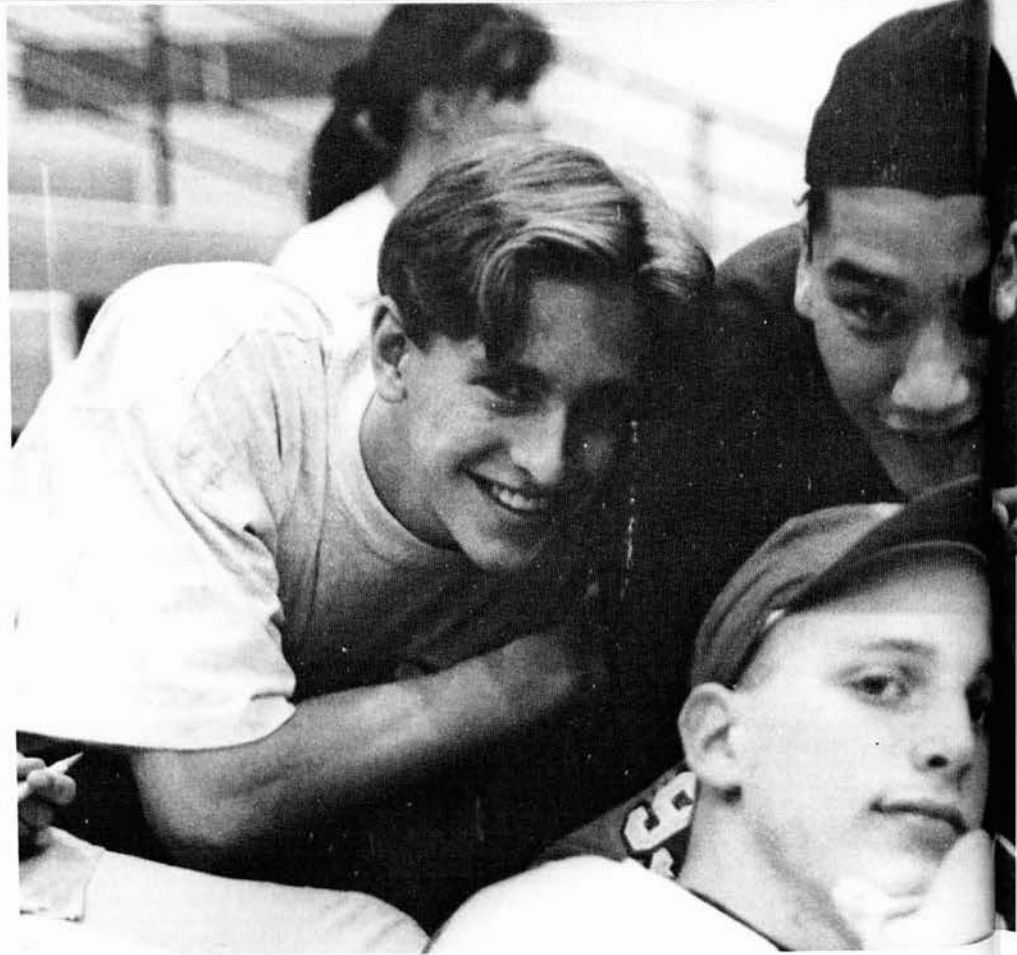

The phrase beyond control can successfully describe any student's life at Central. Every student is busy with school, work, and activities. Many times, it seems like everything is passing you by.

Central's students represent a vast array of different likes and dislikes. We participate in a variety of enriching activities. This section represents in pictures the lives and emotions of Central and its students. For many of us, our experience at Central will be one to remember through the years. It will be the busiest and best part of our young lives.

Altogether, high school is a time of strong feeling and actions that cannot be conveyed in words, nor can it be controlled. Our chaotic time at Central can only be termed as beyond control.

1993 Senior Class Officers

by Nicole Goldenstein

The 1993 senior class officers worked on a variety of activities for the class of '93. The main goal of the officers was to arrange activities for this year and the future. A few of the activities included the senior class picnic, decisions about graduation location, a road rally, and senior spirit week.

The officers campaigned vigorously to make sure they had the vote to win. The officers were elected by their senior peers with recommendations by the Central administration and faculty.

The most important aspect of the officers' duties were the activities organized. President Dan Bagley says the officers met once a week under the sponsorship of counselor,

Robert McMeen. There are six officers who participated in the decision-making process. The president's job was to lead the meeting and bring up new business. This year's president was Dan Bagley who believes that their greatest goal was to "make sure the senior class was represented well, and that they had a good time this year and in the future."

Quatesha Kern, secretary, wanted "to give the class of '93 a sense of satisfaction and something to remember our class by."

The officers' fundraising activity this year was a card show. Collectors of baseball and football cards came together to trade and buy their favorite players. The card show brought in approximately one thousand dollars, which was used for spirit week activities. Tim James, sergeant-at-arms, believes, "The money raised by the card show was a great addition to just selling T-shirts." Another money maker was the sale of the famous senior class T-shirts with their original design.

The over-all success of the officers was due to the balanced personalities of the people. Ryan Bayse, vice president, said, "The six of us were equally divided between the rational and do-it-now type which created balance."

The officers' jobs will continue after graduation. They will reconvene to plan the class of 1993's reunions.

"I will always remember this as a part of my high school career and the valuable things I have learned," said Tommy Huey, treasurer.

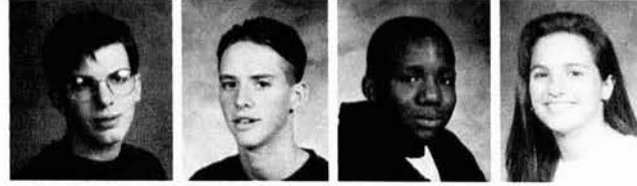

The 1993 Senior Class Officers are President Dan Bagley, Vice President Ryan Bayse, Secretary Quatesha Kern, Treasurer Tommy Huey, Girls' Sergeant at Arms Buffye Hooper, and Boys' Sergeant at Arms Tim James.

Faculty

beyond commitment

by Angela Splittgerber

To say that teachers work hard is an understatement. Teaching takes up much of a person's time. Many teachers spend the greater part of their "free time" doing work for the school and students. Grading papers, planning lessons, and sponsoring activities are time-consuming parts of a teacher's life.

Many teachers devote a large part of their time to school activities. Without this support, many activities would not take place. For teachers, teaching is not just a job, it involves commitment to their work.

This school is also run by other staff members who do everything from helping students with problems to preparing lunch. Central's counsellors, administrators, and secretaries all help to keep the office and the school running smoothly.

From bottles to blackboards

by Erica Corwin and Jenifer Walters

Can you guess who's who? Some Central teachers lent their baby pictures to the O-Book staff, and it is your job to match the correct name with the face. The answers are at the bottom of the next page. Participating teachers include the following:

Mr. Gaherty

Sports

beyond the scoreboard

by Angela Splittgerber

Central has a great tradition in sports. Teams are known for their hard work and strong drive to succeed. Success is not necessarily shown by a win/loss record, but in the attitude displayed by the team.

From football to swimming, Central teams uphold the athletic tradition. Whether students play for fun or for victory, they enjoy the activity and competition provided in the sports program. The fans also contribute to making Central's sports an exciting experience. Cheerleaders help provide school spirit, showing that Central's sports go beyond the scoreboard.

"Of all the teams I've ever coached, this has been one of them," cited head tennis coach, John Waterman, when discussing the 1992 Central tennis team.

This statement reflects the way the year went for the tennis team. With this type of easy going attitude, the Central tennis team had a great season while still having fun.

The Eagles finished with a record of 8-1 and fourth in metro. Their only loss came early in the season to Millard North. Jeff Darst (11) finished third in Metro and in State in number two singles competition.

"The most important thing about tennis is patience because if you're playing a difficult opponent, sooner or later they'll crack," said Jeff.

Seven members from the 1991 season returned to the team this year, Adam Yale (12), Jason Hui (12), Ric Fenton (12), Jeff Darst (11), Grant Rozmarin (10), Clark Lauritzen (10), and Adam Yale (10).

This year Coach Waterman took on fifteen players which allowed the team to add depth with experienced players as leaders. The younger players will be able to pick up skills that will help them in the future. These new members include Tommy Huey (12), Todd Reiser (12), Jeff Kassal (11), Jacob Slosburg (10), Jeremy Fenton (9), Charlie Yin (9), and David Penn (9).

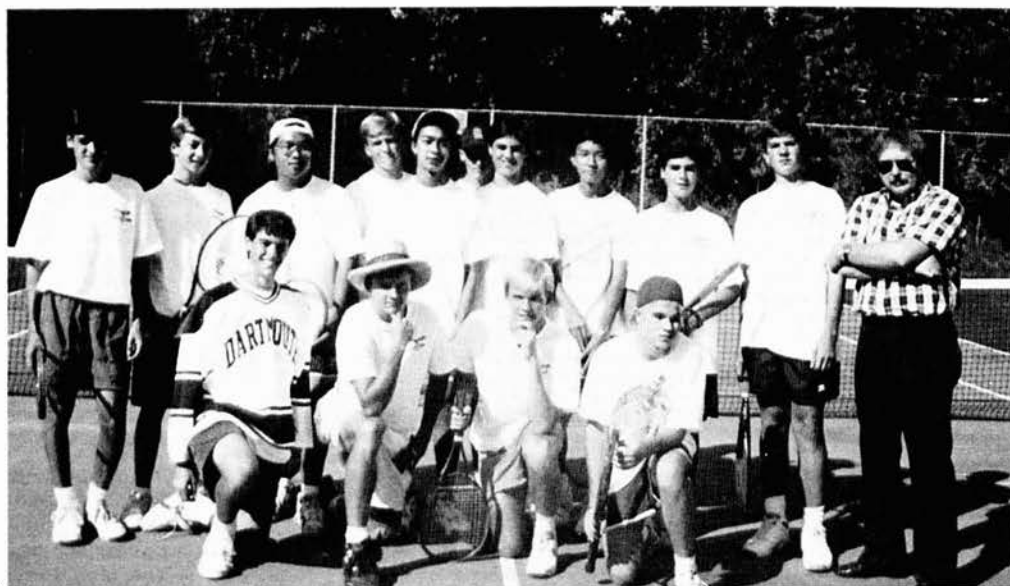

With only four members graduating this year, and the success the team has had, the future looks very promising for Central tennis.

'Tee it high, let it fly'

by Meghan Stanek

"I think we are having a great season," said Nicole Goldenstein when asked about the progress of the girls' golf team. The team suffered a setback early in the season when girls golf coach Mrs. Jo Dusatko broke her arm. Coach Dusatko was not able to attend practice for two weeks. During her absence, Mr. Galus, boys golf coach, stepped in and helped the girls.

The girls, despite obstacles, had a successful season. They won many of their matches and shot a 198, their best score ever, at Elmwood. Part of this success is due to two additions to the varsity team, Liz Crossman (10) and Megan Fangman (9).

The girls golf team starts practice the week before school begins and does not stop until the middle of October. These everyday practice sessions help the team to prepare for tournaments.

This year the team participated in the Abraham Lincoln Invitational and took third place. Individual medals went to Liz Crossman who got sixth and Leah Musselman (11) who got seventh. Other team members who participated include Meghan Stanek (12), Jenny Berg (11), and Megan Fangman.

Although the team did not place at the metro competition, at the district competition Leah Musselman took fifth and the team received fourth place. This fourth place finish eliminated the girls from competing at state, but Leah did qualify with her excellent finish. Leah later said, "I'm thrilled that I get to compete at state this year. I only wish the whole team was going to be there with me." This is Leah's first time playing at the state level.

The girls golf team has a great time together, even when the scores aren't great. Jenny Berg said, "Even when I don't play well and my score is awful, the rest of the girls are there to make me feel better. We're all friends."

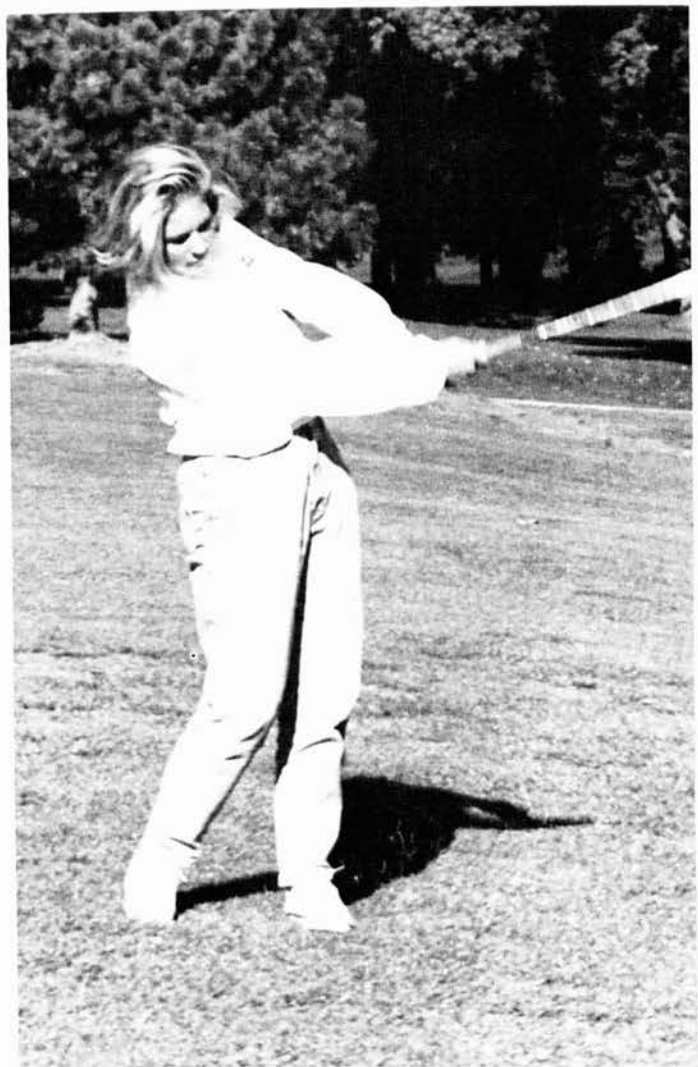

Coach Dusatko carries much of the same attitude about her team. "Our motto is to go out on the course, do our best, and have fun. Every year, the best girls are on my team. They make it all worth while."

Eagles finish season 6-3

By Ryan Shoener

This season saw the return of Central football. Led by six returning lettermen and a promising group of underclassmen, Central finished the season with a 6 and 3 record.

"This was really a positive year. The team proved they could win on all three levels," said third year varsity football coach Joe McMenamain, or as the players know him, Coach Mac.

Going into the season Coach Mac felt that he would need a strong offense and the experience of the returning lettermen to step up. He feels that they by far exceeded his expectations. Also, the younger players played well.

"This was the best group of players I have had in my years of coaching. The seniors provided great leadership and everyone was very team oriented," said Coach

Mac. "My seniors also played hard when I needed them to. Matt Failla and Josh Cusworth were great leaders, but Terrence Whitcomb and Darryl Johnson provided a lot of leadership for the secondary unit."

This year saw the rise of some great players and some players who can be looked for in the future. Matt Failla (12) who has been on the all metro team, was a solid leader. Another stand out in the continuing tradition of great I-Backs was Damion Morrow (10). Morrow finished first in the metro in rushing.

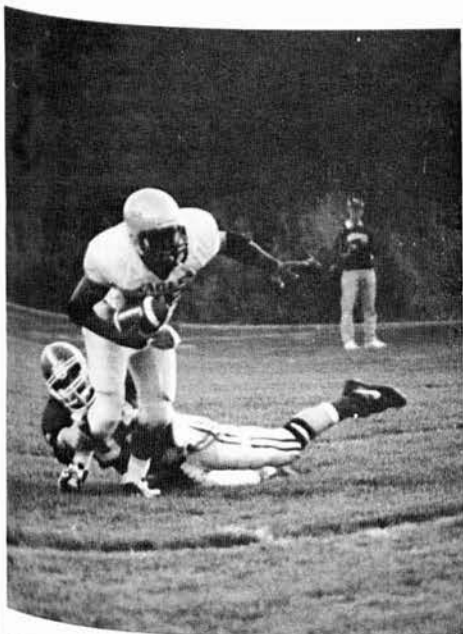

Central only lost three games, one of them to Creighton Prep. "Our only weakness throughout the year was injuries. Against Prep that finally caught up with us. We had injuries to starters and their secondaries," said Coach Mac.

Coach Mac says that the future is bright for Central due to the starters returning and the quarterback prospects.

The junior varsity football team, led by Coach Stan Standifer and Coach Mark Allner, had a great season this year finishing with a 3 and 4 record which did not reflect the true success of the team.

This season the JV team was faced with a shortage in players due to the injuries on the varsity squad.

"The biggest weakness was that the players were getting moved up and down constantly so we never knew who was available for a game," cited Coach Allner. "The main purpose in our level of football is to prepare our players for the varsity squad, and to teach the kids the system of football."

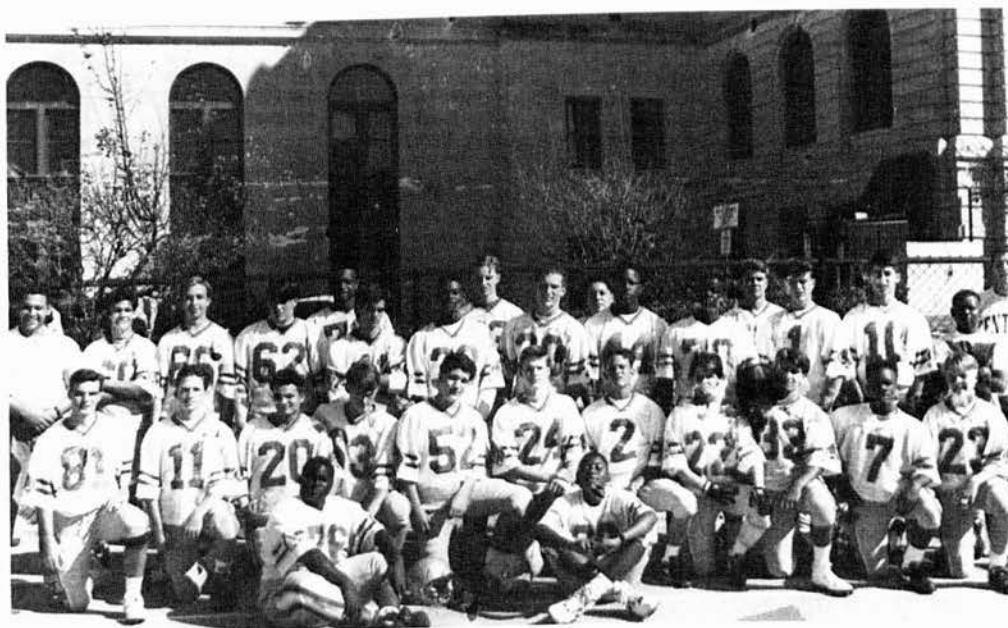

The team found strength in its defense and on offense through the receivers and backs. "The players never quit," said Coach Allner.

As with the junior varsity, the goal of the reserve team has been to condition players for the varsity team. The players were willing to do a lot more than that.

"All the players were over-achievers," said Coach Eubanks. Also adding to their success was the positive influence of coaches Phil Trejo and Scott Brokemeier. Their influence made the players work hard, resulting in a 5 and 3 season.

Looking ahead, Central football is steering towards a very positive future. With several sophomores and juniors playing with the varsity and great coaching, things look to keep at the pace of this year's teams.

Tim Shipman, the ever-loving cross country coach, paces nervously in his quiet home. It is the night before the biggest race of the season: The Benson Invitational.

The team earned second place at the Benson Invitational. "We did a lot better than I thought we would," said Zach Hogya. "We each ran about 3000 to 5000 meters and each finished in the top ten percent."

The Cross Country team "improved over last year," according to Mr. Tim Shipman.

The team practiced running everyday after school from early September until the middle of October. "We usually had the team run two to three miles a day, to fully help them prepare for competition," said Coach Shipman.

According to Coach Shipman, cross country runners are at their best during their freshman and sophomore years. As they reach their junior and senior years, they easily burn out.

"The entire team did very well, but I was especially proud of Zach Hogya (11), Tanya Watzke (9), and Cate Townley (10)," said Coach Shipman. "They were clearly our best runners."

Gymnasts spring and leap in

By Meghan Stanek

The girls gymnastics team has grown from four to seven this year. Jenny Gruber (11) said, "We didn't win that many matches this year because of our size and the fact that only three girls compete in the all-around."

The team practices every day at Central. This year the boys' team from North also joined the Central gymnasts. North is the only school in OPS that does have a male team. The girls feel this presence has been "good for the team." They feel that the boys are able to offer "support and create a real team environment."

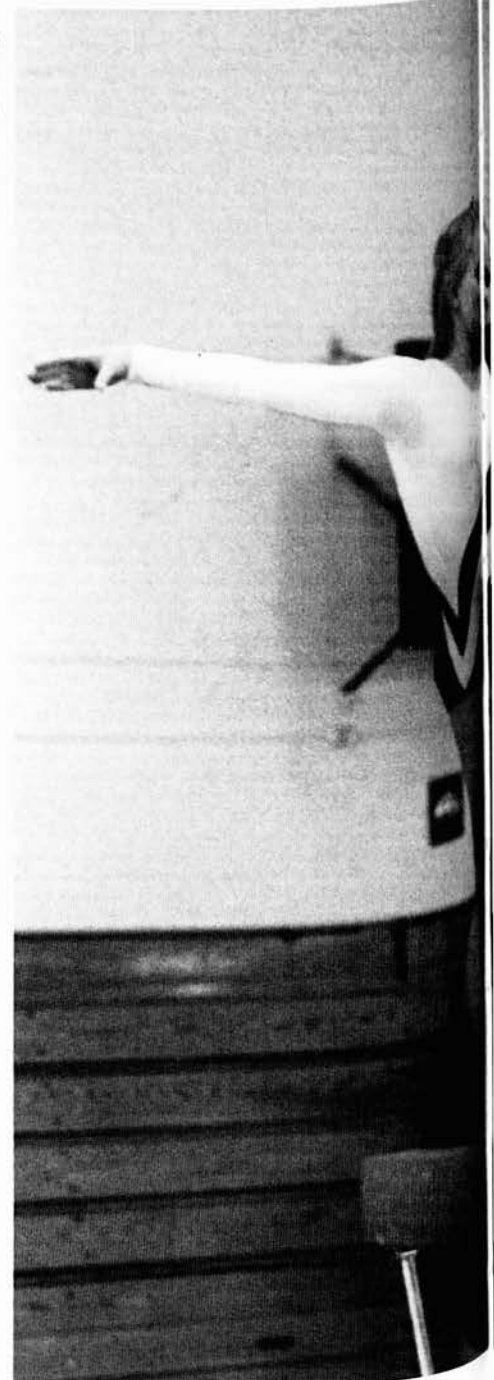

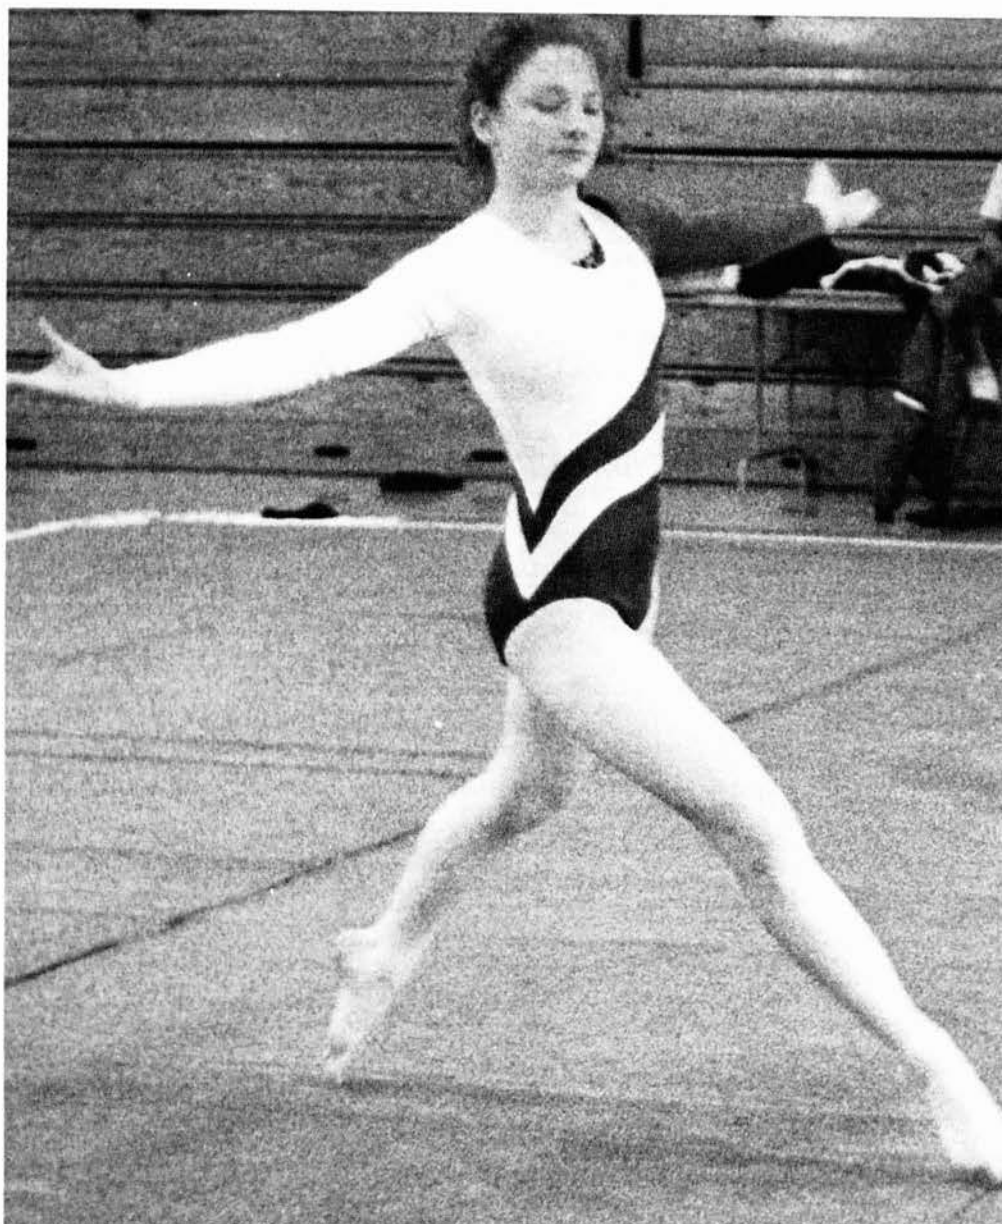

Many of the team members competed in the Metro competition on October 17. Jenny Gruber and Shelley Loland (11) tied for second place on the uneven bars and the team managed to come away with a team score of 101.5 points.

The team coach is Mrs. Connie Martinez. According to Kyliia Clark (11) Coach Martinez is "cool and knows how to work well with the girls."

Jenny Gruber said, "Coach Martinez stands back and lets us all practice on our own. But, when we need help, she is right there."

Metro area gymnastics has become very competitive. Most of the girls on the team have at one time or another competed on club teams. Shelley Loland said, "To do well and place you have to practice with a club all year."

Eagle volleyball flies high

by Meg Allen

Although the record does not show how hard the Lady Eagles worked, they still have the sense of a successful year. Communication played a very important part in the team setting. "Our communication improved throughout the season," Brooke Bahr (11) commented. The old proverb, "It's not if you win or lose, it's how you play the game," illustrates the attitude that the team took about their record.

"The team played with more skill and accuracy than the record shows," Coach Vicki Wiles said. "Even the top rated teams on our schedule left the gym with more respect for the Lady Eagles than the record does."

"We're united as a team," Rachael Newsome (12) said.

Although they were united as a team, Jessica Lawrence (12) commented, "I don't feel that we played up to our potential." Schedule records do not always show the hard work that goes into the season. They show who won or who lost, not that the teams were separated by two points and it was a hard fought game all of the way.

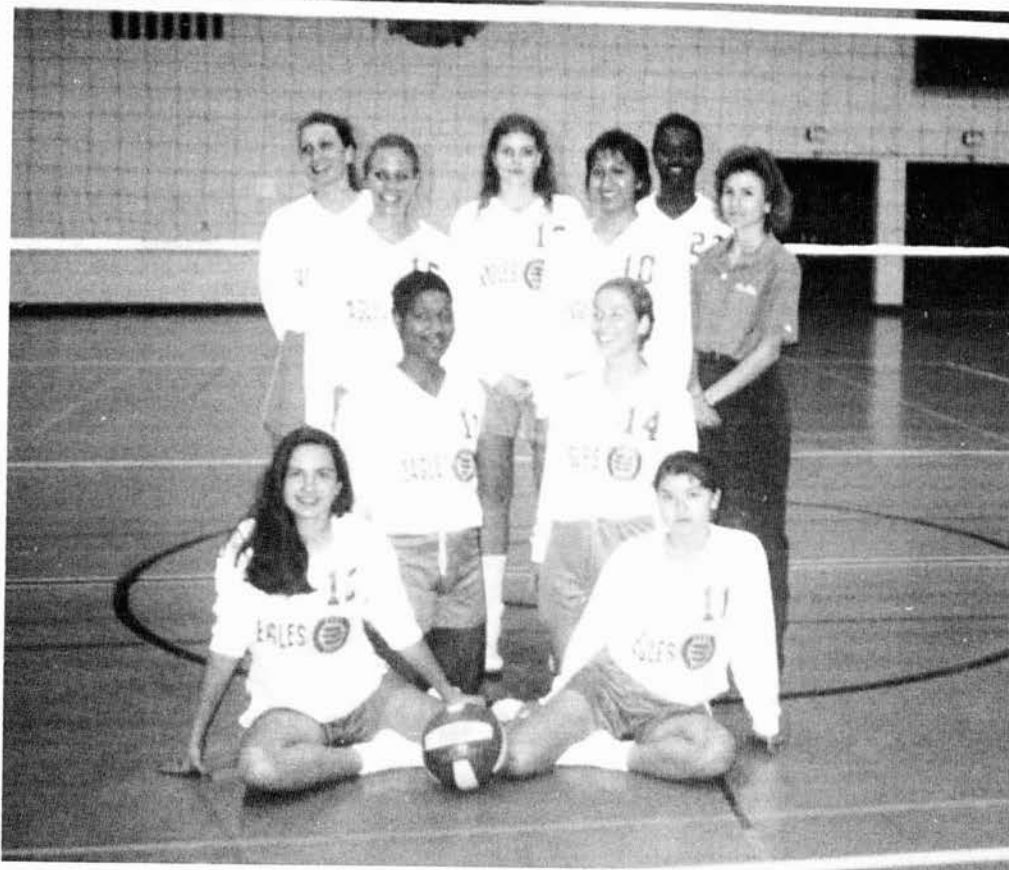

Julia Armenta (12) said, "As individuals we all have good skills, but as a team we don't have great success."

"I feel that this year, even though we didn't do as well as we hoped, we learned about ourselves," Karen Williams (12) said. "Skill-wise we were better than last year but we didn't come together as a team as well as we had hoped."

JV volleyball takes home first place trophy at Invite

by Meghan Stanek

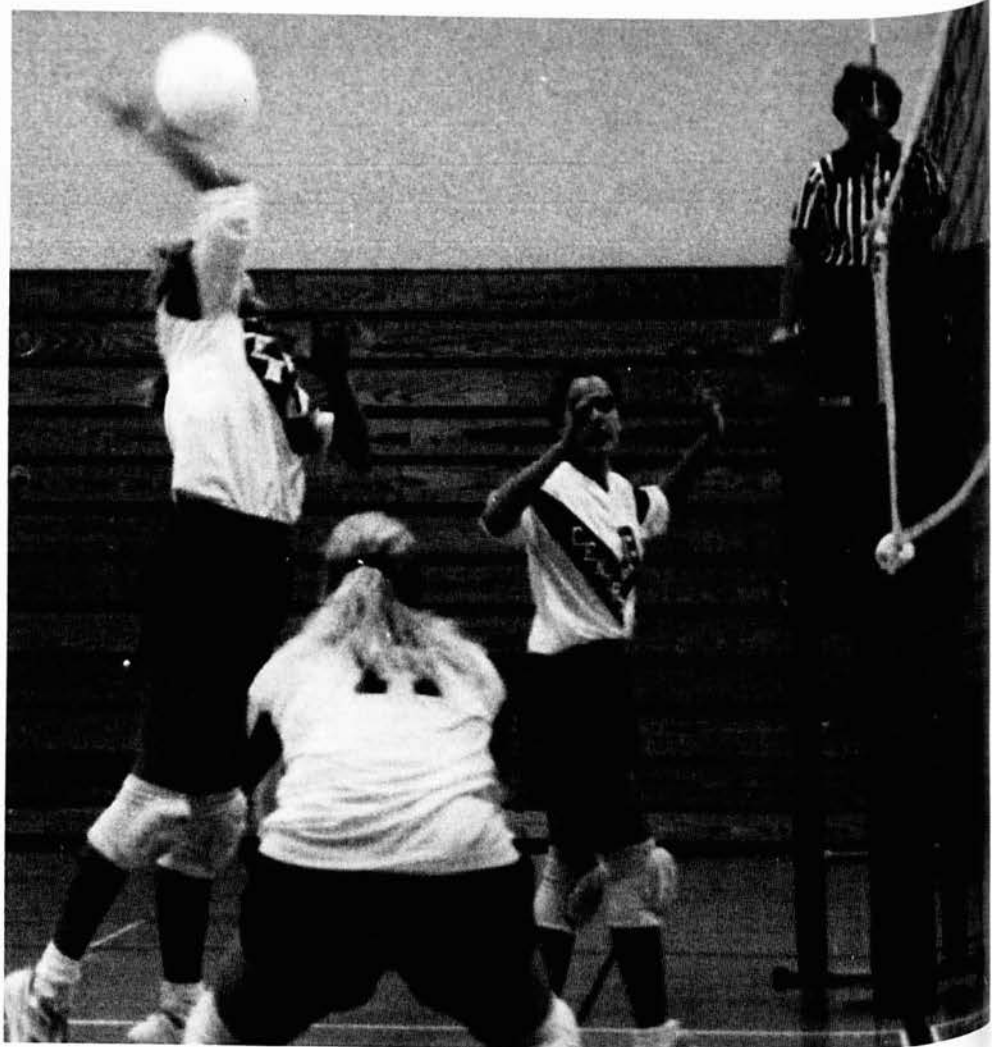

The junior varsity volleyball team had a great season this year. The team won a majority of their matches and a tournament. The girls competed in the Roncalli tournament in October and took home the first place trophy.

Practice sessions for the junior varsity team are as rigorous as those the varsity goes through. Conditioning begins in mid-summer and continues until the real practice sessions begin, two weeks before school starts.

Mrs. Diane Pfeiffer is the coach of the junior varsity team. Tami Minikus (10) said, "Coach Pfeiffer is great. She isn't a coach who stands back and just watches. She is always right in the middle helping us with our technique." After the last game of the season, the girls gave Coach Pfeiffer a plant to thank her for all the time she gave during the season.

The girls on the team "work well together and have a great time." Tami Minikus (10) said, "There were a few problems at the beginning of the year, but we overcame them and had a great season."

Bryson's 'six pack' surprises students with team record

By Meg Allen

This year's freshman volleyball team had negative predictions going into the season. With six players needed on the court and only six freshman girls out for the team, spectators did not think the team could win. "Our record was really good," Nadia Blazevich (9) and Keri Hogya (9) both agreed. "We were 5 and 4 or 6 and 5 depending on if you count tournaments. We came out good for only having 6 players," said Nadia Blazevich.

"Nobody thought we could pull it (a successful season) off having only six players, but we did," Kari Hogya said. The girls also gained friendships through the season. "I only knew one person going into the season. I met people before I came to Central which made the transition less scary. We are really close outside of the court. We go out on weekends, talk on the phone, and are good friends."

Both Nadia and Keri agreed that Coach Bryson was a lot of fun. Nadia said, "He really encouraged us a lot because if one of us had gotten sick at any time during the season, the team would have been in trouble. If any other people would have played, we would have had trouble. We got used to how people played. We were close-knit and stayed together."

Varsity cheer rallies crowd in support of team

by Meghan Stanek

The Varsity Cheerleading squad has undergone many changes in their years at Central. Four girls, Shelley Sirois(12), Taria Conley(12), Amy Wagner(12), and Kerry Coughlin(12), have been cheering on the Central squad since their freshman year. Many of the other girls have been cheering for four years also with other schools. Kerry Coughlin(12) said, "Since a majority of our squad has been together for at least three years, we all get along fairly well." Amy Wagner(12) said, "When we all first met there was some obvious friction, but today, we are all basically friends."

"Since I have been a cheerleader, I have had 5 different sponsors and assistant sponsors," said Megan Young(12). This year's sponsor is Miss Andrea Stranglen. Kelly Roberts(12) said, "Miss Stranglen has taken a different approach towards her position this year. She acts more like coach, offering criticism, than a sponsor who stands in the background."

This year's squad is made up of five juniors and nine seniors. Originally the squads were divided simply by the years of the respective girls, but today the selection process is done solely on the basis of talent. Captain Taria Conley(12) said, "I feel this mixture of years helps facilitate the squads year to year. The juniors who are on varsity this year will be able to help lead more efficiently next year as seniors." Joey Morley(11) said, "Because of the new requirements (to make the squad), we have the best possible varsity squad instead of just the best seniors."

JV cheer; range of ages

by Meg Allen

JV cheerleading has a mix between sophomore and junior girls. This change within the last few years has made it possible for younger girls to advance to the next squad earlier than they had been able to in past years.

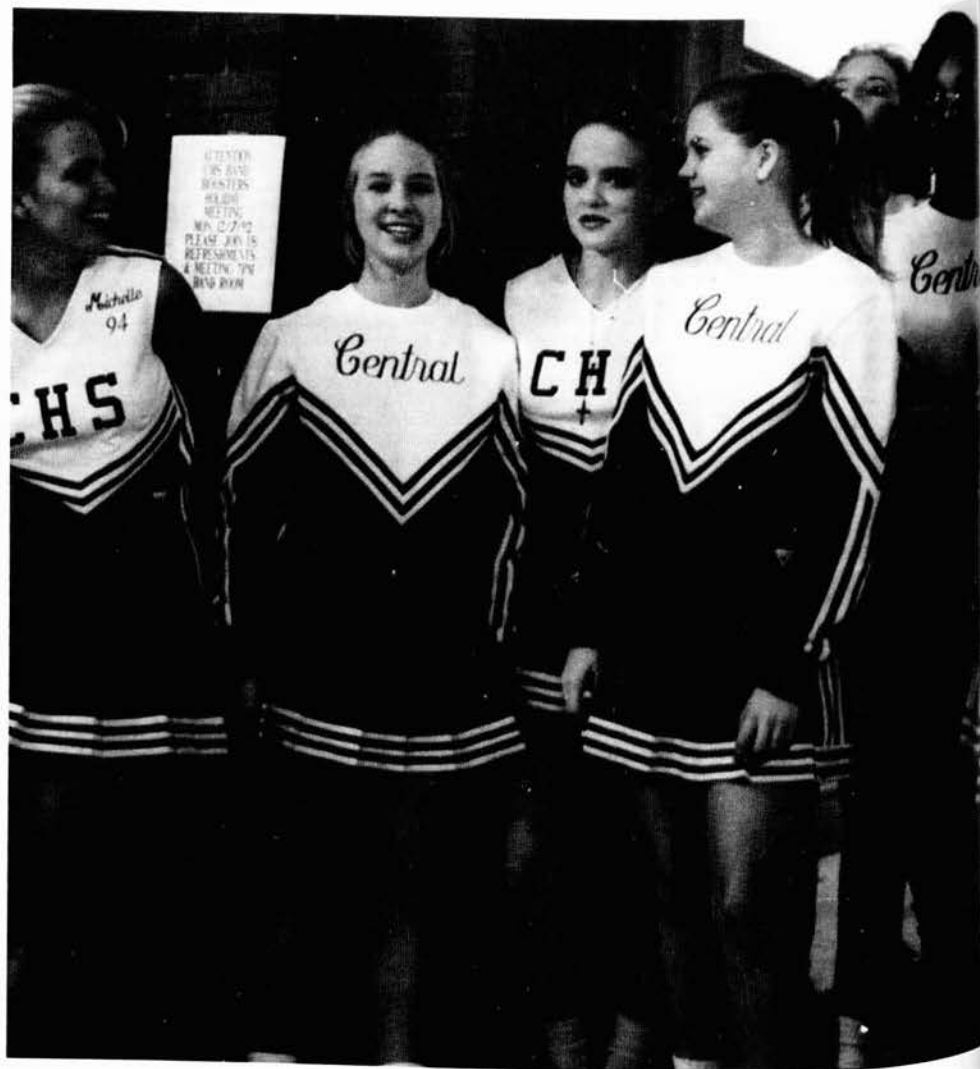

"Being on JV as a sophomore is a big honor," Andrea Wieduwilt (10) said.

"Camp was the greatest," Andrea said. All the girls agreed about camp and early morning practices. "It is difficult to get up in the morning, but you know that if you want to be good, you have to do it. It can be stressful sometimes, but it is definitely worth it," Tami Minikus (10) said.

"Our captains do a great job of organizing things; it is important to have great captains," Tami Minikus said. "Kelly Moyer (11), Shae Lewis (11), and Michelle Buller (11), the co-captains, have helped us out a lot," said Sarah Danberg.

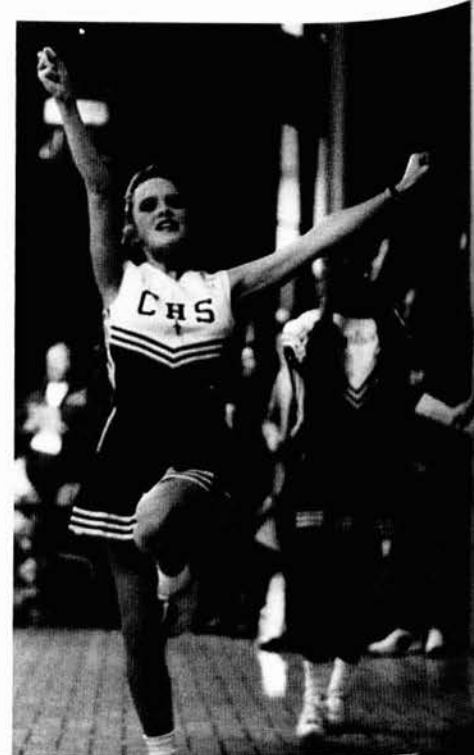

"I hope our sponsor sticks with us," Elizabeth Kaplan (10) said. "Since I tried out last year, we have had three sponsors."

"It is hard to take it seriously when you do not know who your sponsor is going to be from one day to the next," Tami said.

Reserve cheer becomes 'accomplished' squad

by Meghan Stanek

The reserve cheerleading squad has "accomplished quite a bit this year," said Taria Conley (12). While some of the sophomores on the squad were cheerleaders last year, many of the younger girls were not. Due to this inexperience, many cheers require extensive practice time. The girls were forced to learn not only all the cheers required of the squad, but also the technique needed to cheer correctly.

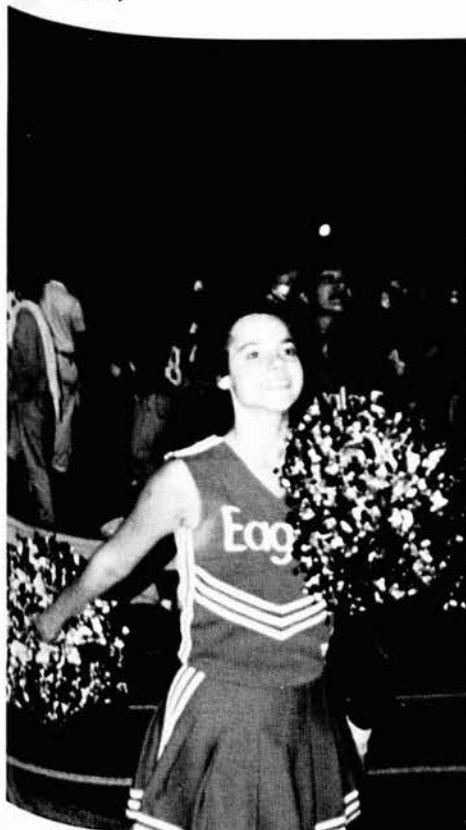

"This is my second year being a cheerleader at Central and I have really enjoyed it. I have made many good friends," said Jennifer Krayneski (10). The girls come to Central not knowing anybody, but by the end of the summer they have made friends.

"A lot of kids don't know anyone when they start school, but I had made many new friends before school ever started," said Monique Petersen (9).

Katy Fleming, varsity captain, (12) said, "I was very impressed with the caliber of the reserve squad this summer. This squad will someday make an excellent varsity squad."

Pom Squad jams under new sponsor

By Meg Allen

Despite gaining a new sponsor halfway through the summer, the pom squad has been "reasonably organized this year," said Kris Berg (10), a new member of pom squad. "When she came in the summer, Mrs. Skoog had to start from scratch. But because she is younger, she is really in touch with what is going on."

"A lot of people don't come to the pep rallies, so they do not realize what kind of dances we do," said Kris Berg.

Sarah Bond (12), co-captain, said, "That although we have a large group of new girls this year, everyone has learned the dances and has done a great job." Jenny Berg (11) said, "Everyone wants to look good so we all try our hardest to learn the dances the right way."

Jenny Berg said, "We try to use a different range of dances. Sometimes we don't get a huge response from the crowd, but we can't please everybody."

Nicole Goldenstein (12), captain along with Sarah Bond, said, "Everyone has taken charge sometime during the year, so we all get along."

RUNNING EAGLE BASKETBALL SOARS PAST OPPONENTS

by Ryan Shoener

This year the Running Eagles were back frustrating defenses throughout the Metro basketball league. The 1992-93 Eagles Basketball team was led by Head Coach Rick Behrens.

The team finished a lot stronger than last year's team and finished with a good record.

The team had several players ranking within the league leaders in scoring, assists, rebounding, and three point shooting.

The team had two players returning from last year's team, Nate Heimuli (12) and Turrane Dawson (12). The Eagles quickly grew as a team and found the winning combination.

"The team really came together towards the end of the year. We really learned how to play as a team a lot better as the season progressed," said Nate Heimuli (12).

The Eagles ran a Loyola Marymount type offense, which was used to increase the speed at which the ball is moved up the floor and concentrated on the fast-break.

The team looks strong for next year as two starters, Eddie Smith (11) and Donnie Johnson (10) will be returning. Also the bench had a lot of young talent on it.

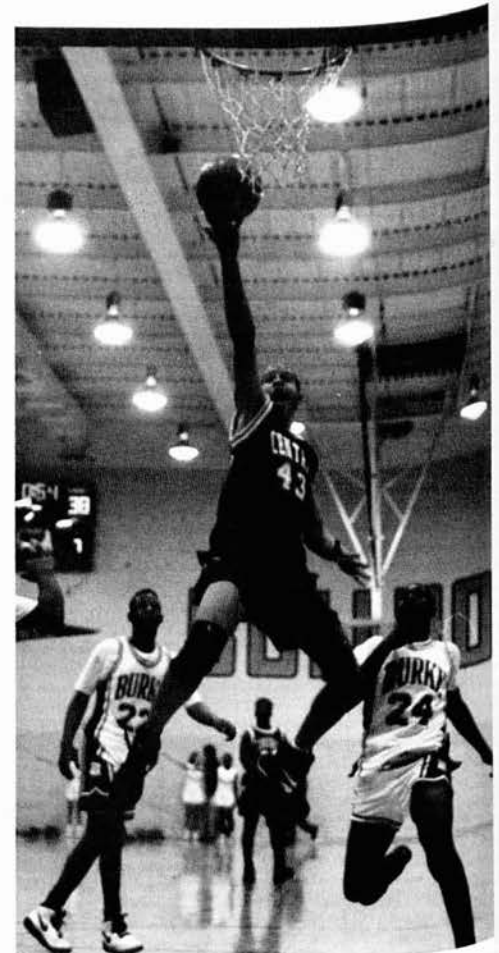

Running Eagle basketball is a tradition that looks to continue in the future, and something other schools' defense will have to deal with.

JV, Reserve, and Freshman basketball teams equip with skills for the future

By Ryan Shoener

Although the varsity basketball teams usually capture all the attention, a lot of good players and hard work are involved in the success of the junior varsity, reserve, and freshman basketball teams.

The freshman team is the youngest team and is led by Coach Jim Galus. The team had hard practices after school, but all the hard work paid off in the games.

"This team was very cooperative and had good listeners. They were all very coachable and should bring respect to Central's name in the future," said Coach Galus.

The reserve team was another hard-working team, composed of all sophomores. The team was coached by Tim Herbert.

The team practiced with the freshmen after school and went through rigorous practices which paid off by getting the team in shape and increasing their confidence to play against the toughest or largest opponents.

"This team seems to be better than in previous years, due to our teamwork," said Devon Stevens (10).

The final team is the junior varsity, which practiced after school with the varsity and was led by Coach Steve Peterson.

Coach Peterson coached and prepared his players, consisting of juniors and sophomores, for the varsity team. He emphasized defense, teamwork, and most of all, patience.

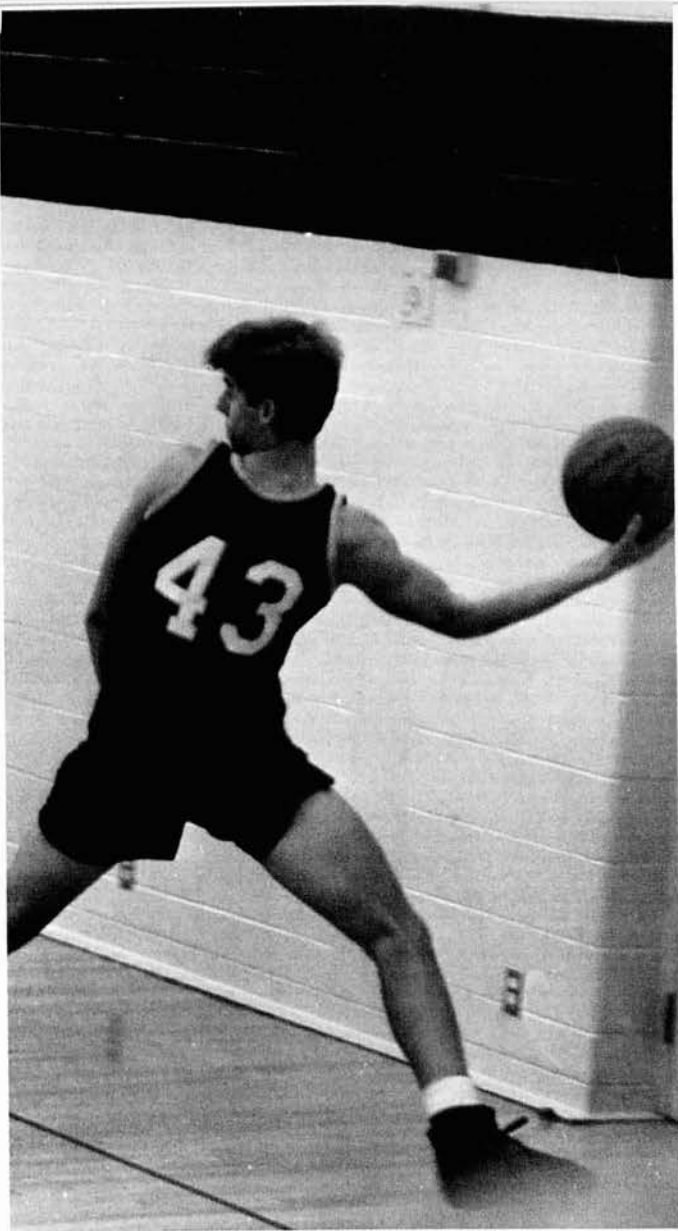

"Coach Peterson always said to work as a team and not play as individuals. I think this is what we all tried to do," said Matt Johnson (10).

The junior varsity's players were Seth Farrington (10), Matt Johnson (10), Chris McBride (11), Ercan McCord (11), Dan Payzant (10), Chris Reid (11), Ryan Shoener (11), Darrel Simpson (11), Billy Vought (11), Gerard Washington (11), Chuck Whitten (10), and Keyland Wright (11).

'Young' girls varsity starts one senior on 1993 team

By Meg Allen

With only one senior on the girls varsity basketball team, the Lady Eagles, do not have much varsity experience. "But as we, the team, play together and gain experience we will improve," said Stefanie Huff (11).

"Our starting varsity is pretty young. There are several freshmen but only one senior. By next year, since we will be more experienced, we will be able to work better as a team," said Brooke Bahr (11).

"We all get along together which helps a lot. This comradery provides a good environment to work," said Brooke.

"I think our team will be better next year due to this year's experience. We have improved a lot from the beginning of the season. The team has a better understanding of how it works and where everybody is playing. It makes the games easier if you always know where your teammates are," Laura Dinges (11) said.

"The coaches work well together and that helps us out. Without good coaches, even the most talented team can't win." Brooke said.

JV girls basketball team, 'getting better and better'

By Meg Allen

Although the JV team has not had winning success this year, they are a team to watch in the future. "Our team is young. By next year and in future years, we should be really good," Latoya Prince (10) said.

"I feel that we are getting better and better as the season progresses," Sarah Laaker (10) said. Melanie Jacobs (10) said, "I think we will do a lot better. If we keep playing together, we will be able to play more as a team instead of for ourselves. I know we could do better because the ability is there."

"We have a lot of good players. If we carry out the plays, we will pull together," said Fredricka Ellis (11).

"Coach Bryson and Coach Standifer are great," Fredricka said. "They are trying to help keep our self esteem up even though our record does not look too good," Latoya said.

"They are teaching us a lot and they know what they are doing," Sarah said.

"When you join sports and clubs, you meet a lot of new people," Melanie said. "We are just like family," Fredricka said.

One-woman dive team has success

by Meghan Stanek

Genisa Zaremski (12) is the only member of the 92-93 Central Diving Team. Genisa feels this occurred due to the lack of recruiting and publicity for the diving team. "The school tends to focus on the swim team and forget that there is a diving team," said Genisa.

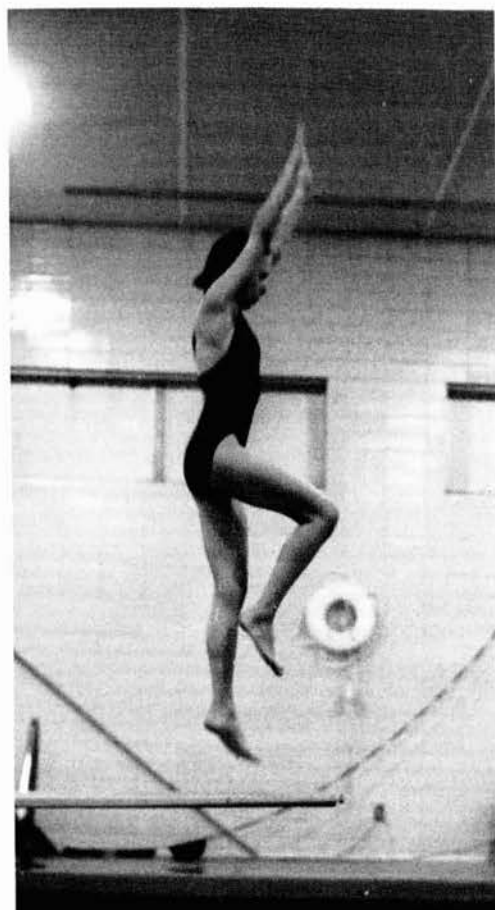

Genisa practices for about an hour a day at Central's pool, Norris. Her coach is Mikala Thomes, former Central student and diver. "Last year I went to Mr. Jones and Coach Allner and asked for their assistance in finding the team a coach. A couple weeks later we had Micki."

Genisa feels her season has been "pretty successful," and with every meet she hopes to improve. Genisa said she has begun to work on harder dives in order to raise her score and qualify for the metro meet. This requires excellence at every meet throughout the season.

Whether it was getting off to a fast start in the freestyle or stretching out to grab the wall in the medley relay, the 1992-93 swim team always worked hard. Led by co-captains Todd Reiser (12), Jon Wendt (12), and Coach Mark Allner, the team was always willing to go all out.

The team practiced daily after school at Norris Jr. High. The team was smaller than in previous years, but the team worked hard to make up for its lack of swimmers. "We made up for our lack of numbers by our strength and heart," said Todd Reiser.

"All the hard work Mr. Allner had us do paid off one way or another," said Jon Wendt. The boys' team returned with four swimmers from last year and saw the addition of Rob Teply (10) and Nick Spinder (9).

The girls were more fortunate only losing two seniors and having a young team. They look to have promising future.

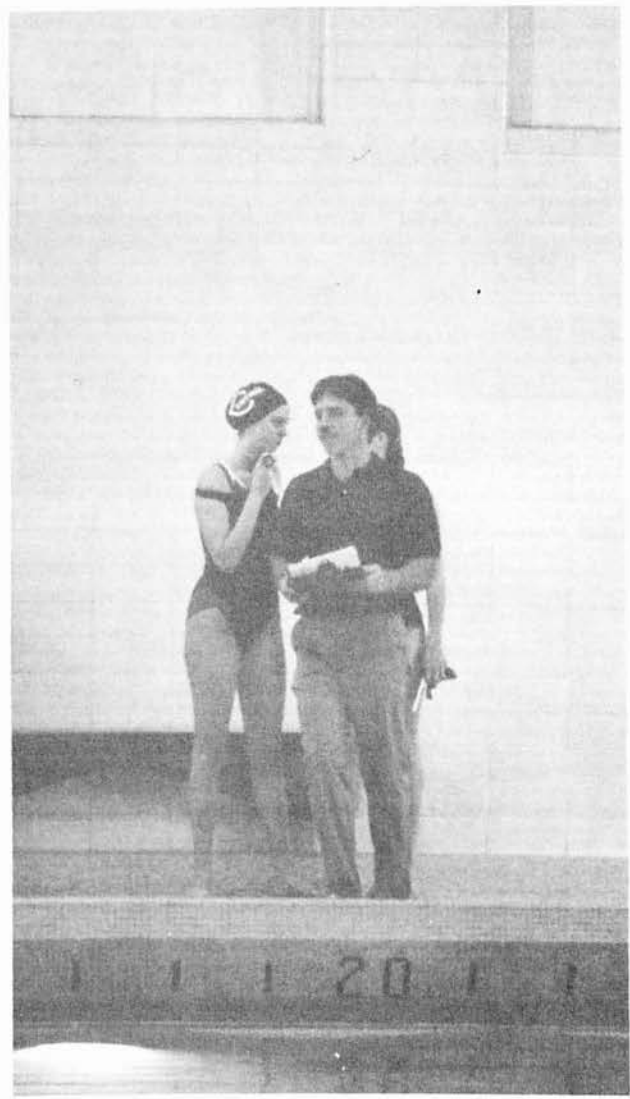

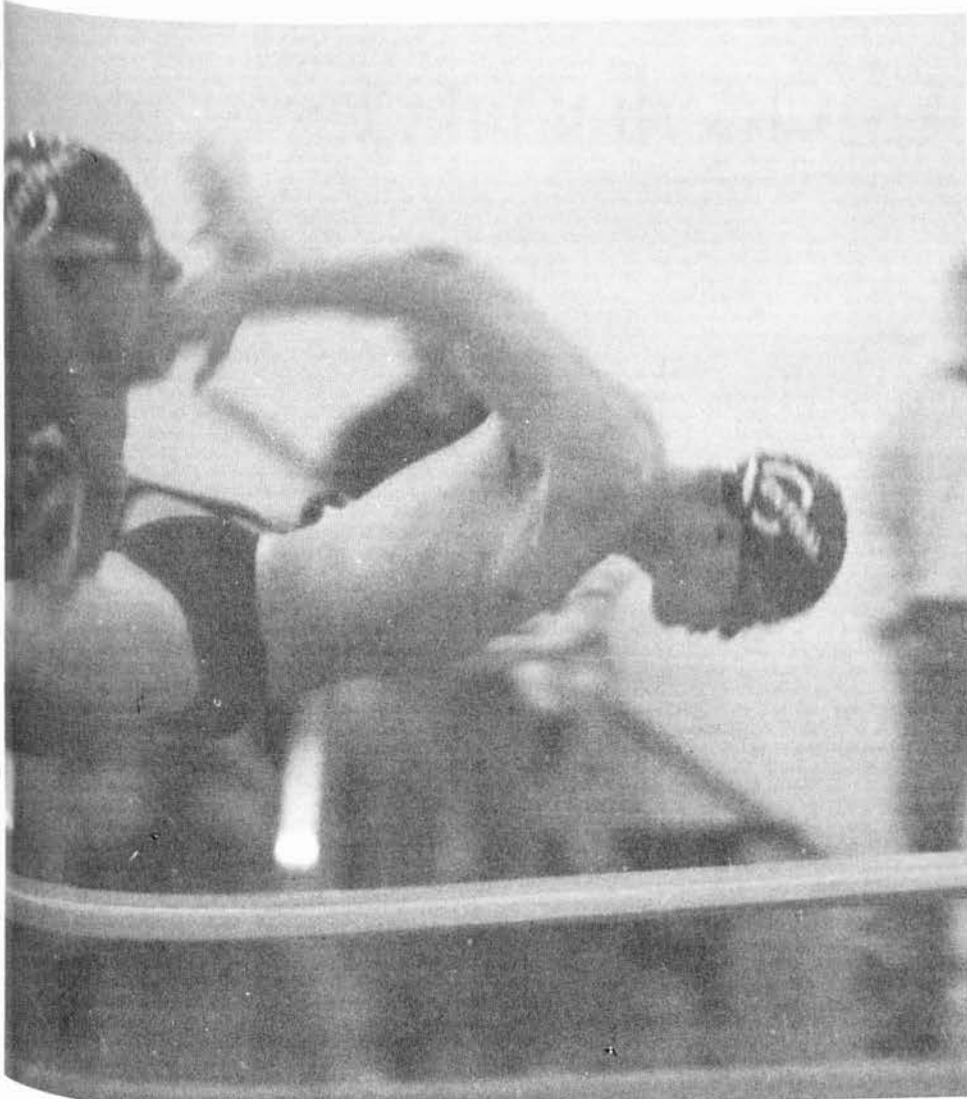

The swim team looks to make waves next year with their continuing hard work.

Wrestlers 'pin' a winning season

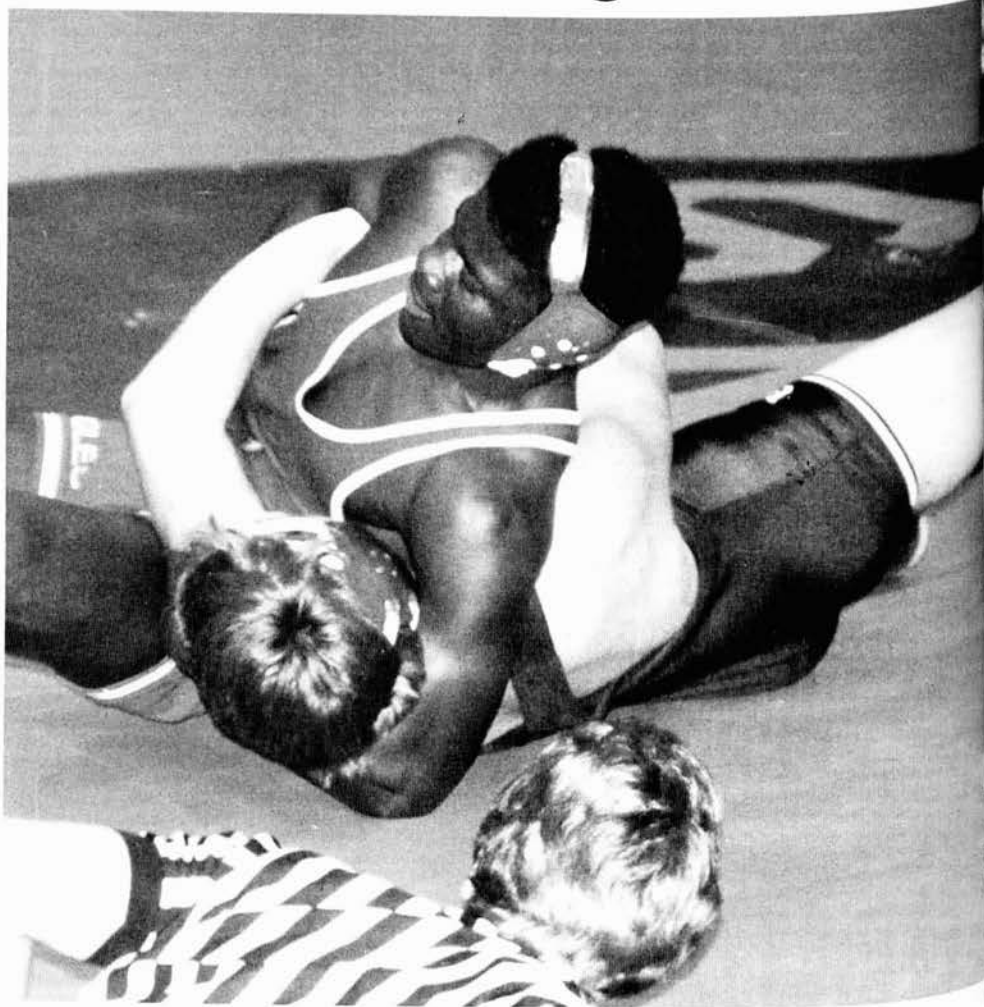

by Meghan Stanek

According to team wrestlers, the season has been going "fairly well." Mike Watkins (12), varsity wrestler, thinks that this year's team has improved upon the '92 team. Mike said that the wrestling team is essentially one unit even though the sport is fairly individualized.

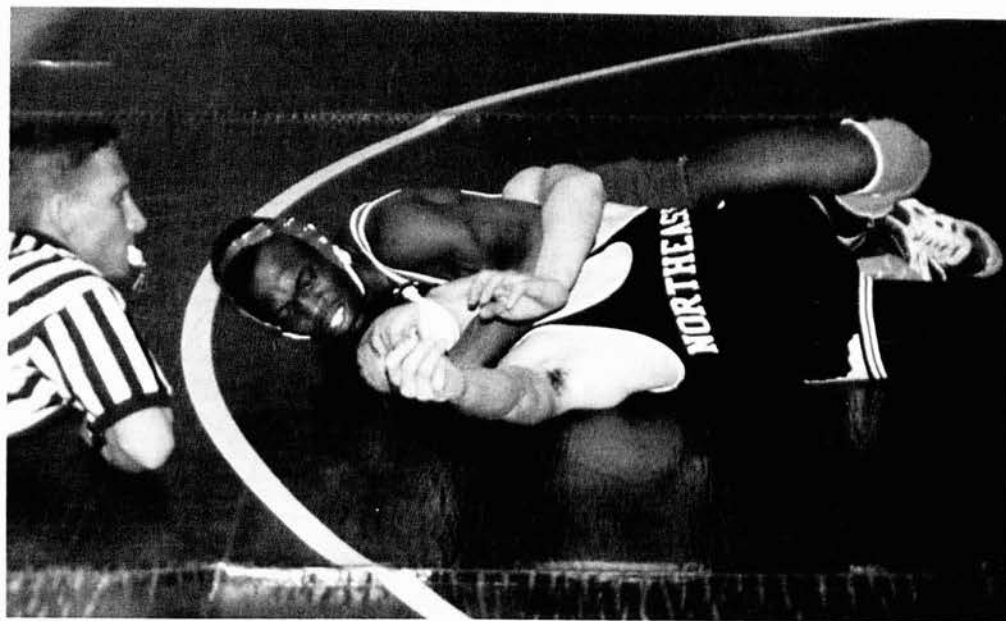

The team competes in four duals and eight tournaments during the season. Although all the wrestlers can compete in every competition, they wrestle in different matches depending on their effort. The tournaments are based on ability, and those wrestlers who win repeatedly are eligible to continue. These eight tournaments include the state competition.

When asked his opinions on next year's team, Mike Watkins replied he was "hopeful." Mike went on to say that approximately half of the "core" of the varsity team is graduating.

The team was very positive when asked about their coach. The team receives individualized help from Coach Kubik daily. Mike Watkins said, "Coach Kubik expects a lot and is very demanding on his players, but in the end all the extra pushes pay off."

POWERLIFTING TEAM BENCH PRESSES OPPONENTS

by Ryan Shoener

The Central High Powerlifting team was back in full force this year. The team was headed-up by Coach Joe McMenamin.

The Powerlifting team is an after-school activity which is open to any athlete who is interested in increasing strength and participating in competitions. The lifters are able to compete in the squat, lift, or "dead" lift.

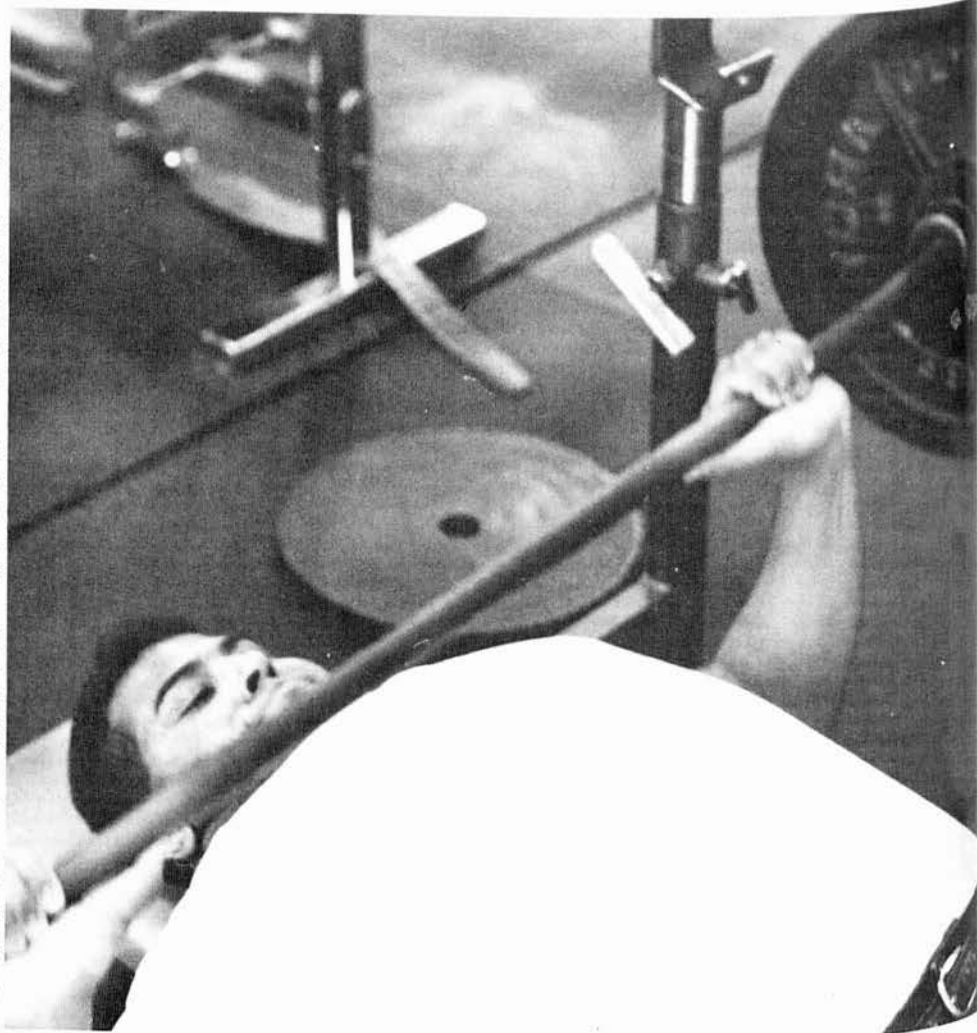

The team is an off-shoot of the weight lifting program, with a more serious side to it due to the competition and limited practices. The team only practiced two nights a week.

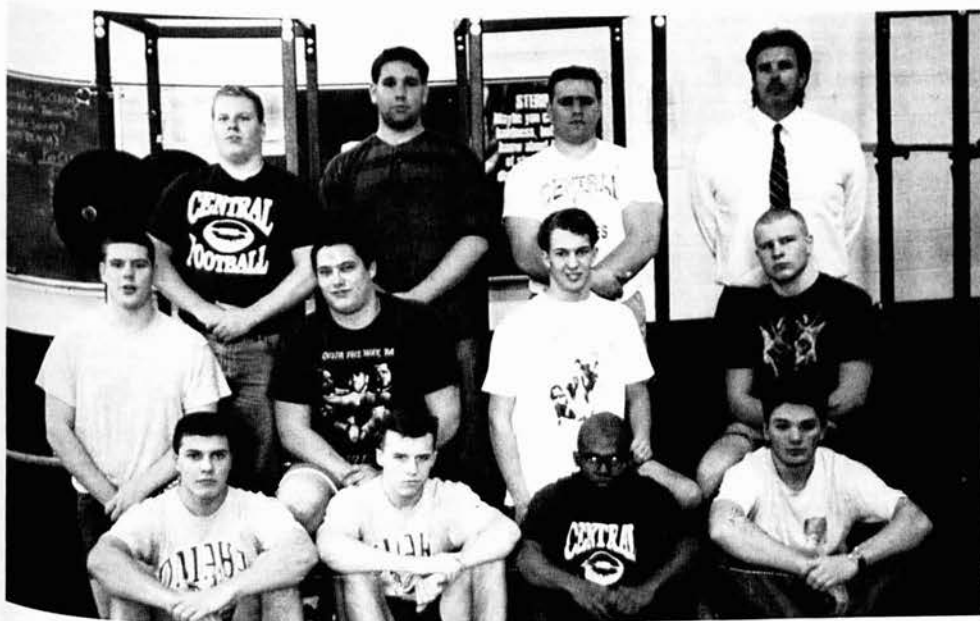

This year's team is returning with state competitors and runners-up: Titus Casebeer (11), Kevin Armstrong (11), and Jason Sacks (12). Anthony Brown (12) was a state champion last year in the 114 lb. weight division.

"The team has a lot of new faces, and we are a young team," said Coach Mac. "We have a lot of good lifters in the heavier divisions and a lot of kids who are willing to work hard."

Activities

beyond the basics

by Angela Splittgerber

A student's high school career is centered on an academic base. However, many students go beyond the basic requirements, and become involved in activities.

Activities provide fun-filled memories to look back upon in later years. Those who have participated in the school musical, debate, band, ROTC, and student council have many fond memories of their times at Central.

A student chooses his activity according to his personal preference. As a result, a student enjoys his activity even more, because it is something in which he is interested. Central students go above and beyond the basics by becoming involved in activities.

Student Council: taking Central High "by Storm"

By Jeff Darst

"The 1993 Student Council has been the most successful Student Council for the Central High student body in the past 30 years," said Ryan Basye, senior. Under the leadership of a new sponsor, Mrs. Judy Storm, Student Council was as active as ever. From selling spirit items to sponsoring Prom, Student Council worked all year long.

Spirit items were sold early in the year to raise funds for the big event, Junior/Senior Prom. The Central Gold Card, a discount card for many local stores, was a new option available to students.

The council was involved in various community organizations throughout the year. Student Council supported The Bloodmobile, the canned food drive, and Honey Sunday. Several members attended the state convention in Columbus in November.

Members of Student Council said they have benefited from their experience this year. "Over three years that I have been on Student Council, I have gained leadership qualities, maturity, and good communication skills," said Quatesha Kern, senior. Dan Bagley, senior, added, "Student Council has been the best three years of my high school career. I think I have fulfilled my potential to the best of my ability. I love all the students."

The 1992-93 Student Council was able to hit the ground running this year because a new set of officers was elected in the spring of '92. The '92-93 officers were: Ryan Basye, president; Dan Bagley, vice-president; Gretchen Pfeiffer, secretary; Nicole Goldenstein, treasurer; Ian Barnes, sergeant-at-arms; Jeff Darst, sergeant-at-arms.

All-Around Excellence Honored NHS Rewards Students

By Sarah Bond

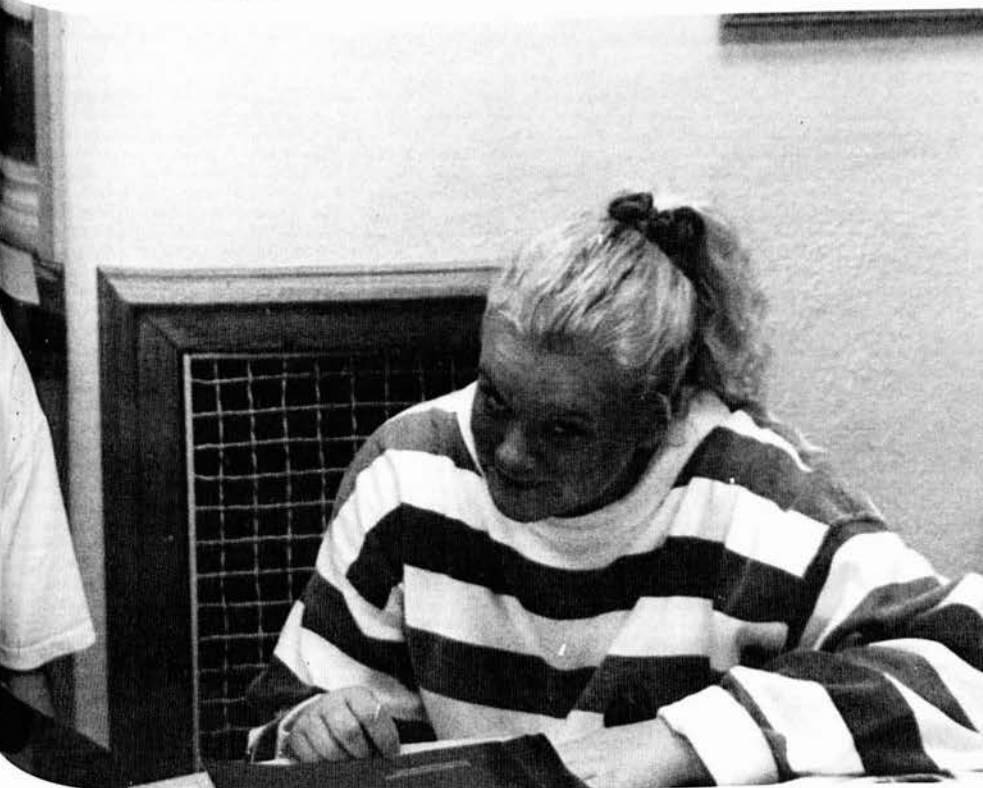

National Honor Society is a prestigious organization that recognizes intelligent, well-rounded students. The criteria students must meet in order to become a National Honor Society member consist of maintaining a 3.5 grade point average, being involved in community volunteer work, and participating in extra-curricular activities.

Members were inducted into National Honor Society at a banquet in the Spring of 1992. Officers were elected shortly after the induction. The officers for the 1992-93 National Honor Society were: Emily Moore, president; Kevin Cody, vice president; Meg Allen, secretary; Mike Gudgel, treasurer; Jon McDonald, sergeant-at-arms.

Activities in which National Honor Society members participated included Honey Sunday, tutoring other Central students in the counseling center, and hosting the annual all-city NHS potluck dinner.

National Honor Society president, Emily Moore, said, "NHS is a great organization. It gives students a chance to be recognized for all-around excellence." Secretary Meg Allen agreed saying, "National Honor Society allows its members to participate in worthwhile community activities and to use leadership qualities in school and out of school."

National Honor Society Sponsors for the 1992-1993 school year were Mr. Robert McMeen, Mrs. Faye Johnson, and Mr. Jack Blanke.

Decathlon goal: 'We're goin' to Arizona, baby!'

by Jeff Darst

"I laughed. I cried. It was an emotional roller coaster," said Ric Fenton, senior and decathlon team member.

No matter how seriously team members are involved in Decathlon, a lot of practice is necessary to compete with the best. Every day, team members practice zero hour. A computer program is used to prepare the team for competitions. Also, practice tests are helpful while getting ready to compete. Decathlon members are occasionally chosen to present topics to the class.

The team is made up of mostly seniors and some juniors. They are divided into three divisions. Each division is determined by grade point average, not including honors points.

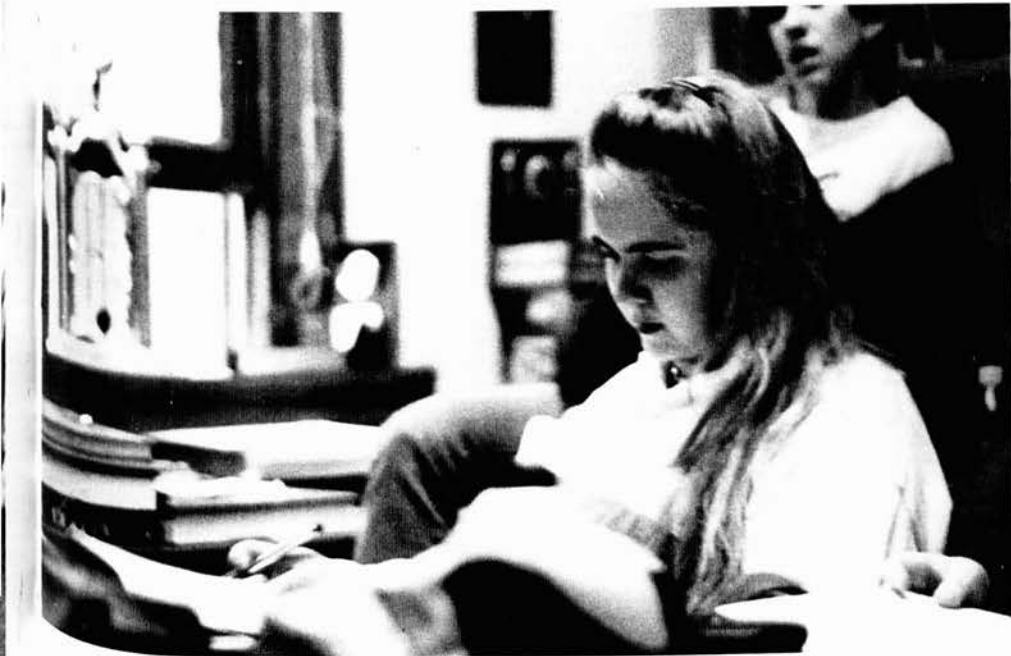

The team participated in competitions in late January and the third weekend in February. The February competition was the state competition. A win at state would mean a trip to nationals in Phoenix, Arizona.

Each competition consists of a fifty minute essay, followed by a half-hour multiple choice test. The test could contain questions on language and literature, math, economics, fine arts, social sciences, and hard sciences.

This year, the social science was the study of the Pacific Rim countries. The hard sciences were biology and chemistry.

Two members from each team then compete in a "Super Quiz." The "Super Quiz" is a very visible test in which each student's answer is shown on an overhead projector.

"If you have the wrong answer, everybody in the world knows it," said Mrs. Kovarik, decathlon coach.

Central Debaters learn, compete, then succeed

by Jeff Darst

The Central High Debate classes are worth more than one credit to the students who take them. The classes meet every day, ninth and tenth hour. The advanced debaters meet tenth period. The classes are taught by Mrs. Bertch, who also teaches social studies. Mrs. Bertch gives advice to the students while they practice during class time. For the first time, the classes can meet in the dramatorium this year. This allows for a place to anchor any materials that may be used in the classes, rather than having to transport everything from room to room.

Beyond school work, the students have opportunities to compete every week. Competitions are held throughout the year on weekends. Central attended competitions at Millard North and Bryan. Norfolk, Hastings, Lincoln, and Watertown, South Dakota were the locations for other competitions. The team even held its own competition at the beginning of February.

In addition to the competitions with other high school students, the debaters also teach, judge, and lead discussions with junior high students. CHS debate students held a workshop for junior high debaters.

"Debate teaches ethics, alternative ideas of argumentation, and speaking skills. It also teaches invaluable people skills which are necessary to succeed into the 21st century," said Craig Lee, senior. Senior Thad Domina, Debate president, added, "What can I say, debate is great!"

The group planned a trip to Worlds of Fun in Kansas City near the end of the year, as they had in past years.

Register staff full of new ideas

by Sarah Bond

The goal of this year's Central High Register staff was "to work hard and try to be the best paper and staff Central High School has ever had," said Jon Wendt, senior and assistant editorial editor. He added that the Register staff tried to accomplish this goal "by performing under pressure and appreciating the cooperation within the staff."

The 1992-93 Register staff met sixth and seventh hour in the journalism room, 315, where they were under the direction of Mr. Gaherty. Each staff member was assigned stories and deadlines for each edition of the papers. The staff then worked hard to put out a paper once every month.

"This year's staff had a lot of new ideas and the desire to make this the best paper ever," said Todd Reiser, senior and layout editor of the Register.

Under the leadership of editor-in-chief Katie Cleary and executive editor Kristen Perry, the Register was able to use and develop the new ideas of the staff.

Jeff Berg, senior and business manager of the Register, said that the staff was continuously "very busy but it was definitely worth all work we put into it. All in all, being on Register staff was a really good time."

'93 O-book staff 'avoids fatalities,' develops close friendships in production

by Jeff Darst

The official production of the 1993 O-Book began on the first day of the school year, but preparation for the book actually began the previous spring. Members of the staff left school last year knowing what position for which they would be responsible. This allowed for an early start in August.

The first several weeks of the year, the staff ironed out a plan for the theme for the book. "The general consensus of the staff is that although many fights erupted during the process of theme selection, there were no fatalities," said Angela Splittgerber, junior. Company and individual deadlines were set at various intervals throughout the year. Teamwork and determination were necessary to successfully complete each big deadline.

Many members of the staff did not know each other at the beginning of the year. "Although we came in here as strangers, we left as friends," said Rebecca Garcia, senior. Senior Meg Allen added, "This is the only class that I feel my relationships have advanced further than the normal classroom atmosphere."

The 1993 O-book was the thirtieth book published under the direction of Mr. Gaherty. "This year's group really has made doing the yearbook enjoyable. They are really dependable concerning deadlines," he said.

Dimension staff publishes Central students' writing

by Nicole Goldenstein

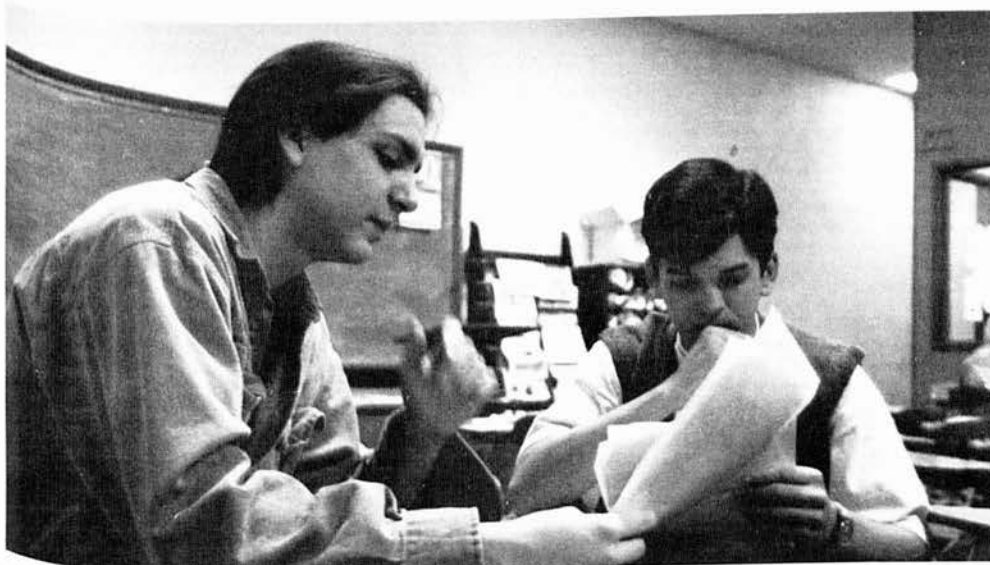

Dimension is the literary publication by Central's creative writing classes. Mr. Gaherty, the journalism and creative writing teacher, started the book in 1978. Dimension gives students a chance to have the experience of piecing together a book of writing completely on their own, working together to make it sell.

The staff is composed of two editors from each class, a selection committee, a promotion and sales team, and a layout committee.

Each class submits its writing which includes poetry and short prose or essays. The anonymous entries are selected randomly by the committee. "It is very rewarding to have our own writing published," said Dylan Gaughan, junior.

The book is open to any student, not just those in creative writing. The book is complemented by art work from the creative writing classes and Central's art department.

Dimension is started and completed in the Spring for sales. The cost of the book is only a dollar to cover printing costs. "Dimension is a showcase for the excellent writing talent at Central High," said Mr. Gaherty.

'A Night in the Big City' lights up Milo Bail Student Center

by Jeff Darst

The 1992 Homecoming Dance was the night of October 3, an earlier date than previous years. UNO's Milo Bail Student Center was the site for the big night. The dance began at 8 p.m. and ended at midnight. Once again, the weather cooperated for the nicely-dressed student body.

The cheerleaders and pom squad coordinated a successful evening that was preceded by a wild spirit week. The cheerleaders and pom squad put in six hours of hard work at UNO on the Saturday of the dance to illustrate the theme, "A Night in the Big City."

For the second year in a row, the Eagle football team crushed its homecoming opponent. This year's victim, Ralston, fell 40-8. The early season success of the football team raised school spirit leading up to the Homecoming Dance.

Candidates for king and queen were elected by the student body. King candidates included Dan Bagley, Jeff Berg, Matt Failla, Kyle Hovorka, and Demitrius Richards. Queen candidates were Taria Conley, Nicole Goldenstein, Rene Johnson, Jessica Lawrence, and Emily Moore. The coronation was held at 10:15 p.m. The 1992 Homecoming King and Queen were Kyle Hovorka and Rene Johnson. Last year's royalty, Eric Behrens and Heather Holland, returned to crown this year's royalty.

As in past years, a deejay played the music for the dance as opposed to a live band. The Picture Man, a photography company, was hired to take pictures throughout the night.

All State not just for athletics; fine arts gets recognition, too

by Jeff Darst

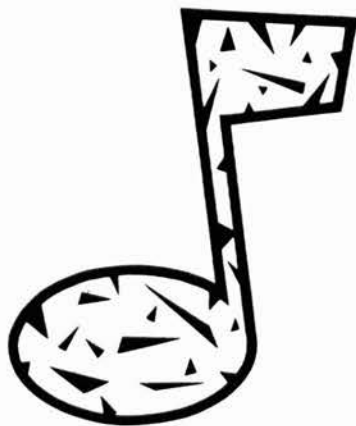

This year, several Central students were selected for All State choir, band, and orchestra. Each student must audition for judges at various tryouts in the middle of the year. Selection is then made on the basis of the audition. The location of the audition this year was Elkhorn.

Any school throughout the state may enter students. Tryouts are generally done through the teachers, and results are generally revealed about a month after the audition.

The instrumental musicians try out for individual "chairs" and the vocal musicians may audition for solos.

Danielle Eames, junior and violinist, said, "You have a chance to work with new people in a new atmosphere. You get so used to working with people in Omaha, it's a totally new experience." Junior Michelle Chandler added, "It's all the best musicians in the entire state. It's just amazing."

Josh Perilo, junior and All State Choir member, said, "We had a wacky, crazy, fun time!"

Studio Art: a 'great opportunity' for selected Central art students

By Briana Hooi

Some of Central's most promising art students are found in the Studio Art classes. These students are a select group of junior and senior art students who have completed Art 3-4 and whose journals were selected by the art teachers.

Two classes were held this year. During fourth and eighth hour the students gathered in room 425. The members feel that they are a close group. Genisa Zaremski, senior, said, "Studio Art people will never be forgotten."

Studio Art is different than normal art classes because "it is a great opportunity to work independently and to try different things," said Megan Burnett, senior.

The students competed in several competitions including the Scholastic Art Awards, the Bellevue Senior Show, and Road Show. Their art will also be proudly displayed on billboards throughout the city.

CHS Eagle Elite marches on to Walt Disney Medley

by Sarah Bond

"We got a lot accomplished this year and morale was good," said Angela Splittgerber, junior and drum major, about the 1992-93 band.

The 1992-93 Eagle Elite started the year with evening practice at Central during the summer of '92. Many of the members then attended band camp in early August at Peru State College. At band camp the members learned the fundamentals of marching and "picture making," along with the songs that made up their show.

Erica Corwin, senior and drum major, when asked about the CHS Eagle Elite and being drum major, said, "Being in the Central band and being the drum major takes a lot of dedication and desire, but the important thing is I enjoy the work and the responsibility."

The band performed at halftime of home Central football games. They also participated in competitions like the city competition called the Omaha Marching Invitational and the state wide band competition. This year the theme of the band's show was "Disney: Then and Now."

Other activities the CHS band participated in included the fall and winter pep rallies, where they played the Central High School song to increase school spirit and crowd excitement.

Senior Matt Focht said, "Band is a lot of hard work but in the end, it's worth it."

Jazz Band members "relax and enjoy" class

By Rebecca Garcia

Jazz Band is a group of select individuals who enjoy playing in a social setting. The twenty-one member group meets everyday tenth hour under the authority of Mr. Wilger. The members come into this group out of the regular band. Once interested, they must go through an audition in which they play selected musical pieces.

During the year Jazz Band plays in many competitions and events. In the fall, they participate in the Bellevue East Jazz Festival. In March, they have an active part in the Road Show. Members also play at the Military Ball and at assorted banquets. The one event that students look forward to the most, however, is the UNO Honors Band Competitions.

"Jazz Band is more relaxed and easier to fall into than any other music class that I have ever been in," said Dustin Culton, senior.

According to Marcelles Walker, junior, "to really enjoy Jazz Band, you have to love jazz!"

Work in the 'Pits' grueling but worthwhile for CHS performers

By Rebecca Garcia

Pit Orchestra is a diverse group of Orchestra students who want to be more involved in Central's fine arts productions. Auditions are held each year for volunteers who are willing to stay after school and practice the music for these productions. In order to try out, interested students must sight read for Mr. Wilger. Pit Orchestra members performed the music for this year's production of Hello Dolly!

These students stayed after school everyday and practiced until they achieved the perfect sound. About two weeks before the opening of the musical, Pit Orchestra began practicing with the actors. Some nights these students stayed here until seven o'clock in the evening.

When asked to comment on Pit Orchestra, Sarah Beran said, "It was hot and tiring and it was hard work, but it was worth it."

Charles Muffly-Cunningham (11) knows that variety is the spice of life. He entertains fellow "pit" members with his antics.

Additions to orchestra include young members

By Sarah Bond

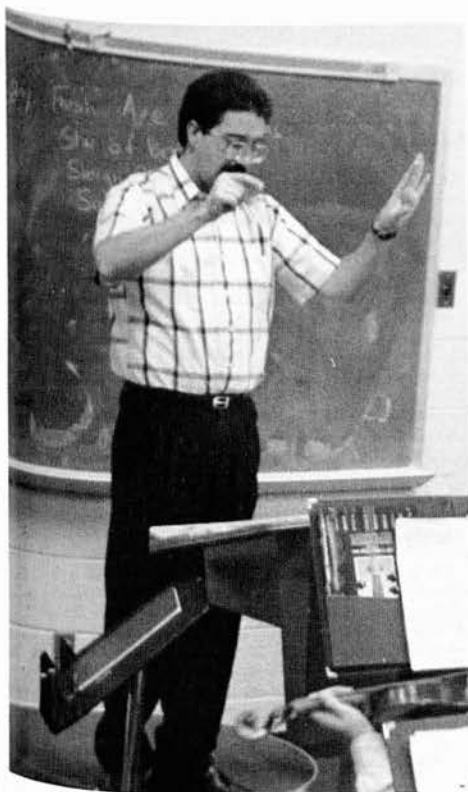

"I like orchestra because it gives me a chance to play in school," said Danielle Eames, junior.

The 1992-93 Central orchestra was a group made up of a few juniors and seniors and a lot of freshmen and sophomores who are new to the group and to the school. A large cello section made up of many new members was added to the orchestra. Another addition to the group was Wayne Rasmuss, senior, the orchestra's only bassist.

Orchestra participates in activities like district competition, adjudication night, fall, winter, and spring concerts, and Road Show. All orchestra members are required to tryout for All-City Orchestra and some try out for All-State Orchestra. Within the orchestra there was a quartet and a number of trios that performed at the concerts and at the various competitions.

This year the orchestra had a string specialist, Miss Becky Kia, a member of the Omaha Symphony, who came in to help the students with their technique and performance.

Danielle Eames said, "We (the orchestra) usually pull together and end up improving for Road Show and other performances later in the year."

A cappella is a mix of music, fun, and good times

by Sarah Bond

A cappella starts long before eighth hour on the first day of school. In the spring tryouts are held for prospective A cappella members. Members are chosen based on their ability to sight read music and on their voice tone and quality. Most of the students selected to be on A cappella are juniors and seniors, a few sophomores and this year one freshman was also selected.

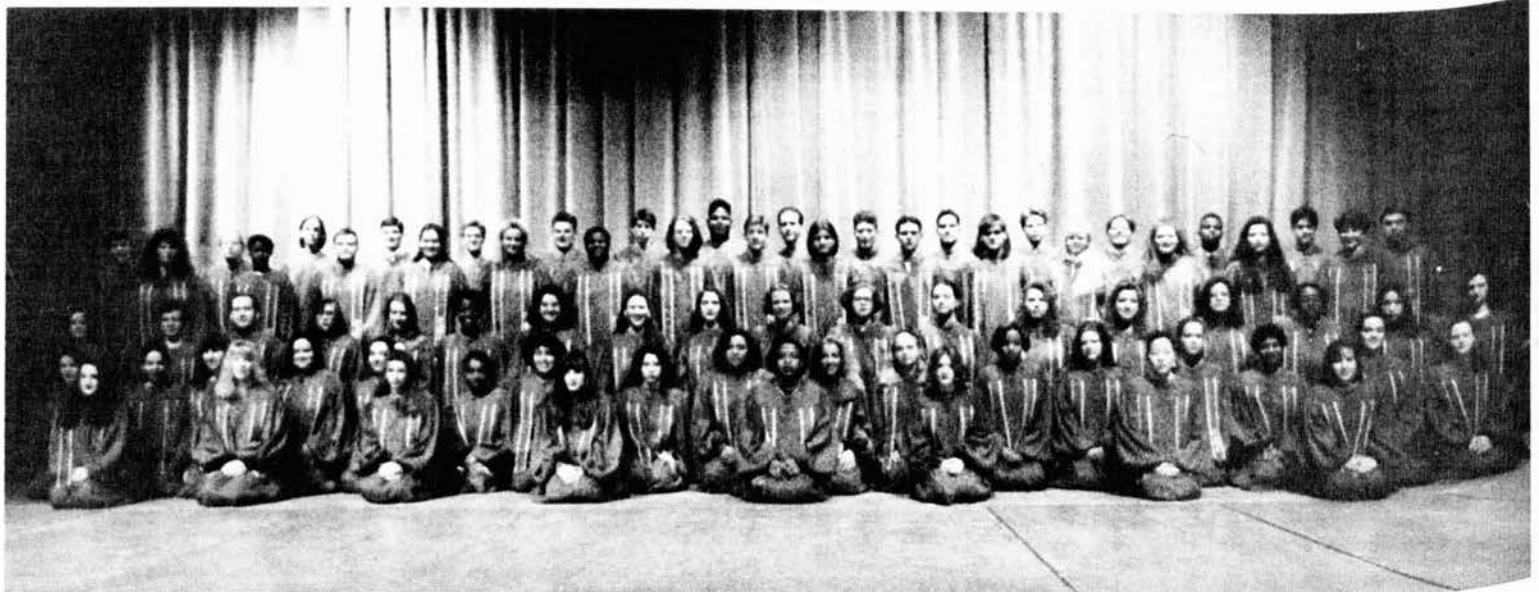

Sarah Gilbert is the only freshman on A cappella this year. She said of this experience, "It's a big honor to be chosen and a shock since I'm only a freshman, but the older kids have really made me feel welcome."

Once members are chosen and school starts, A cappella meets every day eighth hour. During class the singers do a lot of sight reading and voice drills as well as practicing the music for their next concert.

A cappella participates in competitions like districts, All City and an adjudication. The group also performs for an All City Fall Music Concert that was held at Bryan Senior High, a Winter Music Concert held in the courtyard at Central, and at Road Show.

Tamie Sawaged, junior, said of her experience in A cappella, "I think A cappella is a very close-knit, fun-loving group."

CHS Singers acquire reputation around Omaha

by Sarah Bond

"CHS Singers is really challenging. It requires you to work really hard and devote a lot of time to singing," said Jeff Berg, senior, of his experience with CHS Singers.

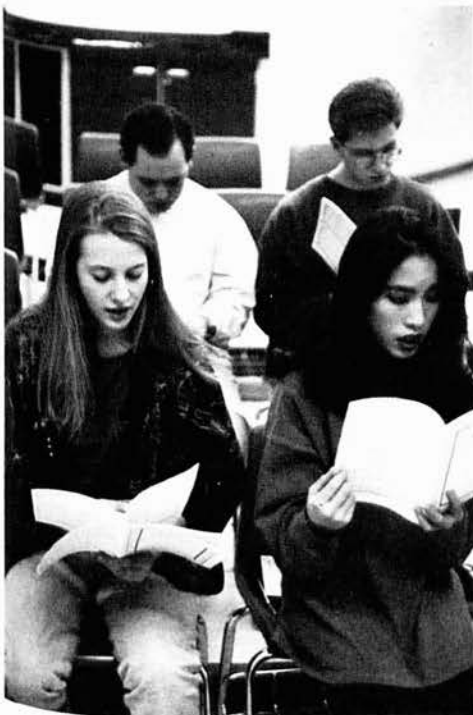

CHS singers meet third hour every day to rehearse their numbers and learn new music for another performance or just for fun. Each person in the group is also required to be in A cappella, which meets eighth hour every day.

CHS Singers is Central's elite performance choir. The group represents Central at many functions and the group's reputation for excellence is known throughout the area.

The CHS Singers perform at area elementary schools, junior highs, businesses and numerous Christmas and holiday functions. The group also performs at the Winter Musical Concert that is held in the courtyard and at Road Show.

This year CHS Singers were given the honor to perform in Lincoln at All-State. They entertained students from around the state who were chosen as All-State singers.

by Sarah Bond

Junior Choir is a singing group at Central that meets everyday during second hour. Throughout the year members of Junior Choir prepare to continue on to A cappella the following year. Members do have to try out for Junior Choir in the spring.

During class the singers do warm up voice exercises; then they sing a variety of songs. Some of the songs Junior Choir sings are songs that they plan on performing for a concert; others are songs they sing just for practice and for fun.

Roslyn Fraser, sophomore, said about Junior Choir, "I really like being able to sing in school. I think that it's been a great experience for me and for the other members of the group."

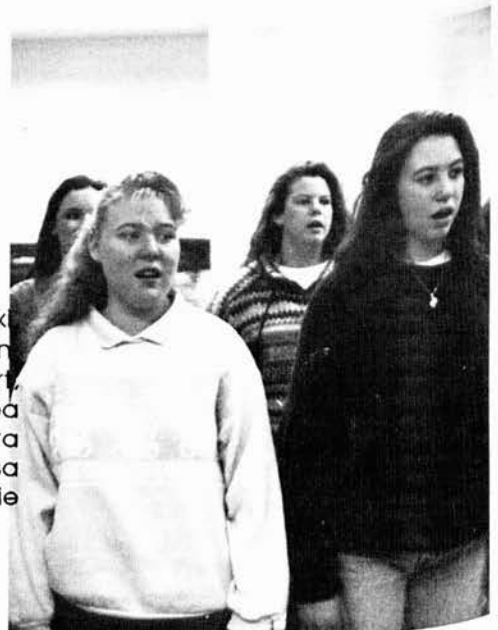

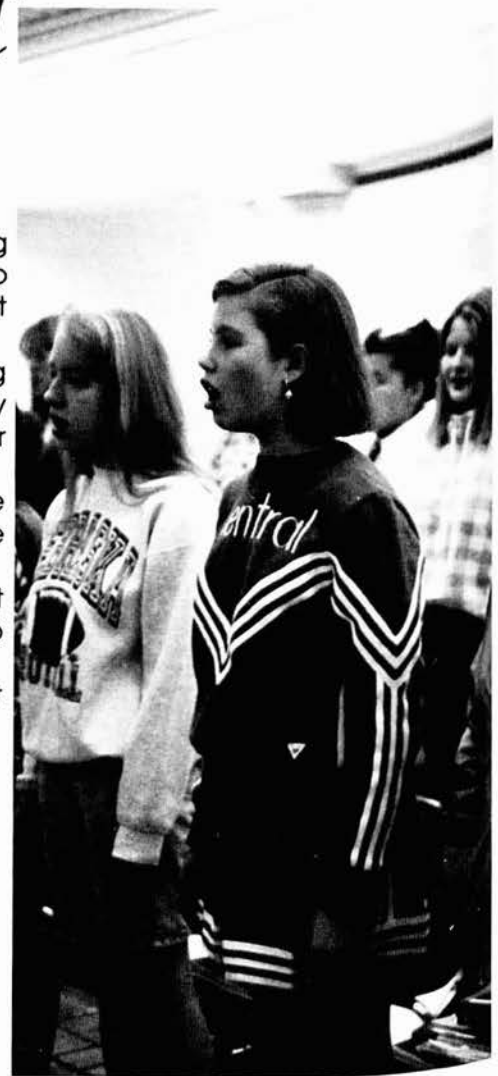

This year the Junior Choir performed in the Winter Music Concert that was held in the courtyard and Central's Spring Music Concert. The group was also able to go on a trip to a regional competition.

Liz Crossman, sophomore, said, "Junior Choir is a lot of hard work but it is a good experience and worthwhile."

Second year of Central's new Gospel Choir filled with shows

by Jeff Darst

Gospel Choir is a new singing group at Central. Last year, Mrs. Johnson, CHS counselor, was approached by a student suggesting that Central start a Gospel Choir. She did, and the group has increased in popularity ever since.

The Gospel Choir performs at many events through the school year. They perform at the Black History Program and Road Show. Outside of Central, the group travels to other schools for holiday programs and Martin Luther King, Jr. programs. Some students sang at the Beautillion, Joslyn Art Museum, and Dana College in Blair.

As the name suggests, the group sings gospel music. Mrs. Johnson acts as the sponsor and director. She also plays the accompaniment with the singers. Not all of the students attend the same events, but Gospel Choir has about 25-30 members.

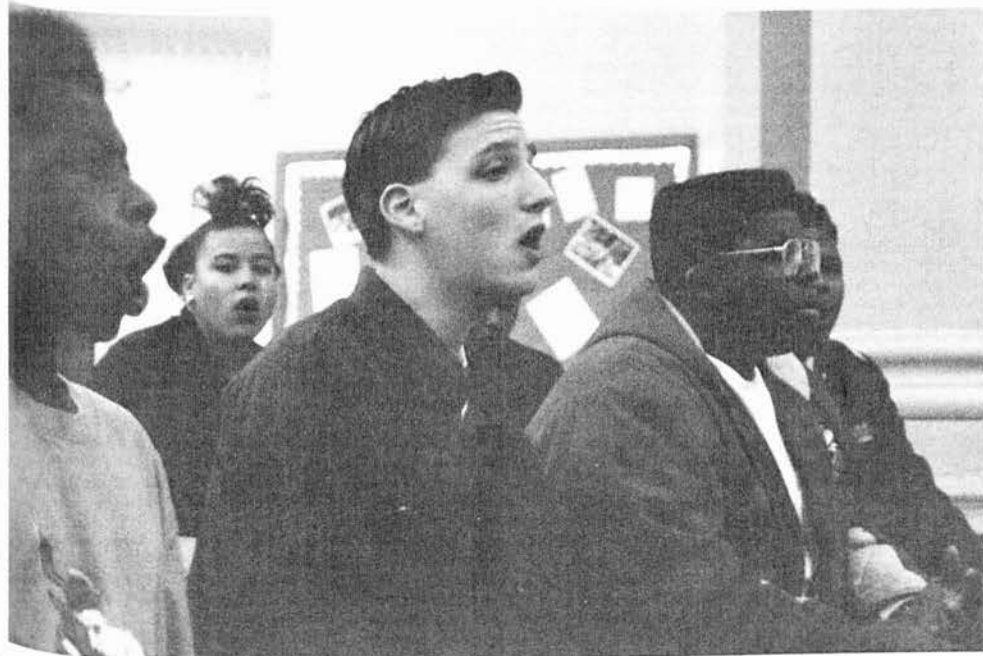

They practice at irregular intervals during the year. For a week or two before a performance, the group meets before school and occasionally after school. They perform two or three songs, and some have motions to them.

Tryouts are not necessary, and anyone can sign up for Gospel Choir.

School year brings new singing group to Central

by Jeff Darst

A new singing group was introduced during the 1992-93 school year. The group is called Bel Canto. Bel Canto is a "vocal ensemble comprised of sixteen women's voices," said Mr. Finch, vocal music instructor and Bel Canto supervisor. Each of the girls that was interested had to tryout in an audition the previous spring. The group is a very select group determined only by auditions.

They perform at school concerts with the other vocal groups. Bel Canto also participates in concerts outside in the community and the District Music Concert.

"I've learned a lot, and it has been a great experience so far," said Rene Johnson, senior. "It has been fun, and I've made a lot of friends," added Anna Perilo, freshman.

Bel Canto meets fourth hour every day.

Stagecraft does impossible: works hard and has fun too

By Sarah Bond

"Most people think that we don't do anything but we really work hard. Most of the people know what they're doing and learn a lot over the year," said Katy Deatheridge, senior, about stagecraft.

This year's stagecraft was responsible for designing and constructing the sets for both the Fall Play and the Winter Musical. This task kept the group constantly busy from October all the way through December. The group was also responsible for the backstage work and the running of both of the shows.

Brian Christiansen, junior, said, "I like doing the plays and making things come together. I also like building the sets and running the shows."

Other responsibilities of stagecraft included constructing back drops for Road Show, helping Student Council build any large structures they might need for Prom, and helping set-up anything that needs to be set-up in the courtyard.

Mr. Hausman said of his stagecraft group, "Stagecraft has really worked hard this year. I've got a bunch of really great kids that came through and pulled off the impossible."

First fall play in twenty years brings 'Happy Daze' to Central

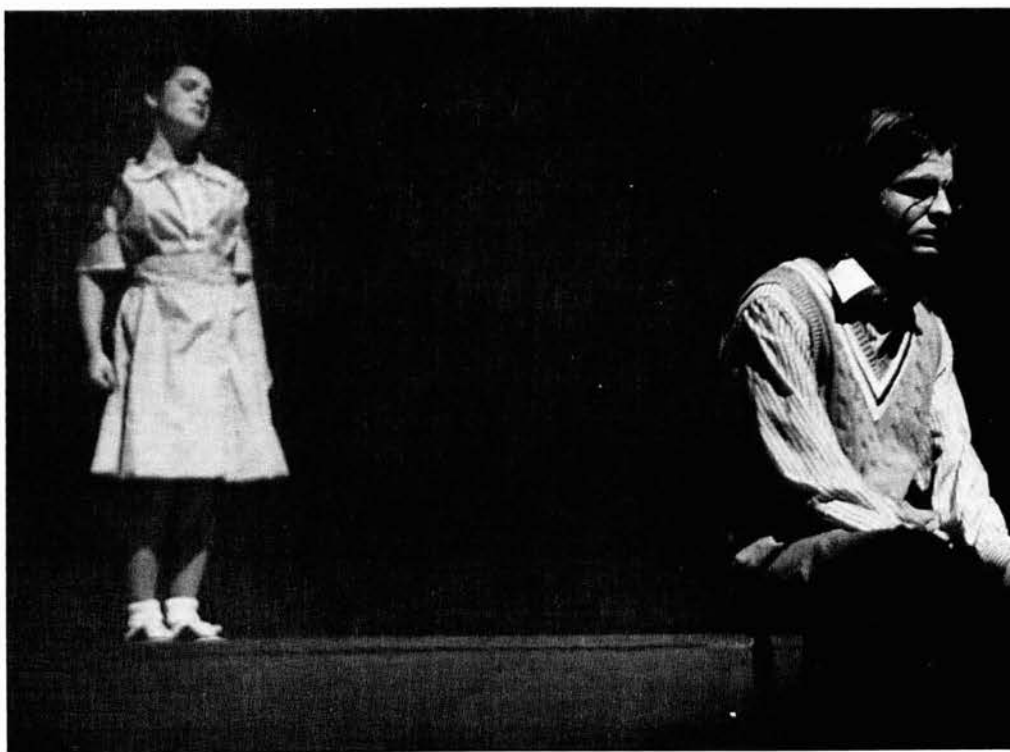

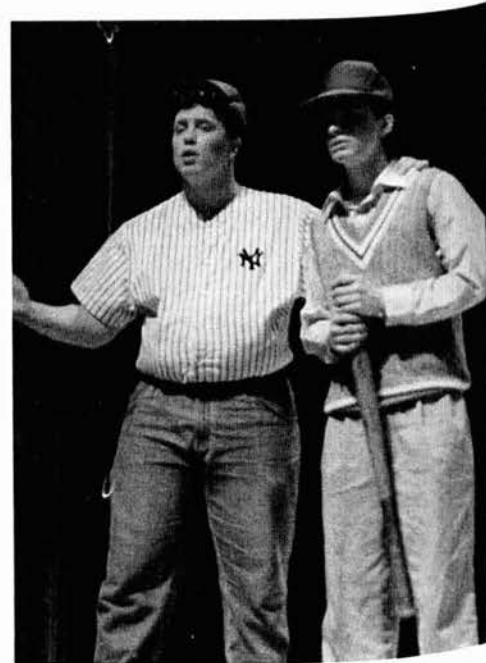

By Jeff Darst

"The public doesn't realize the blood, sweat, and tears, that, sometimes very literally, go into our plays. It's a genuine bonding experience," said Chet Haunton, junior. For the first time in twenty years, Central put on a fall play production, headed by CHS Drama teacher, Mrs. Pegi Georgeson. The play, "Happy Daze," by William Gleason, was put together by over 100 Central students.

The main character of Happy Daze, J. T. Springer (played by junior Josh Perilo) feels out of place in the 90's. When problems surface at home, J. T. is confined to his room with only a television set to keep him company. He becomes engrossed in 50's type shows and creates a fantasy world in which he is a popular hero. Eventually, J. T. comes to terms with his problems and takes on the world of the 90's.

Practice for the play began with auditions during the first week of school. The preparation began with after school practices and developed into dress rehearsals the week of the performance. Evening shows, on Thursday, October 22 and Saturday, October 24, were put on, sandwiched between the student matinee Friday, October 23.

Mrs. Georgeson said the group was the largest with which she had ever worked. She said, "It required a lot of patience because there were so many performers." She added that there were also many new people in the play. "Eventually, though," she said, "everyone became committed to what they had to do, and they put on one heck of a show. It was well worth it." Josh Perilo added, "Lots of people didn't think it would work, but we pulled together and it turned out to be a good show."

Students and staff added to dedication equals 'Hello, Dolly'

by Jeff Darst

The winter musical for the 1992-93 school year was a performance that was made possible only by the cooperation of several groups. The advisers, the pit orchestra, and the characters of the musical had to work together to organize "Hello, Dolly." The cast practiced for the musical for nearly two months, including the final two weeks with the pit orchestra. They put on four performances. A student matinee was scheduled for Wednesday, December 16, but a snow day pushed the matinee back to Thursday.

Mr. Finch was the director, and he was assisted by Mr. Leach and Mr. Wilger. Mr. Leach was hired from outside of Central to aid the cast in preparation. "Mr. Leach is the most energetic, artistic, and compassionate teacher I've met. He made the cast of 'Dolly' more like a family," said Emily Moore, senior.

Emily played the main character, Dolly Levi. Christian Harding, junior, played opposite Emily as Horace Vanderguild.

The plot revolved around Dolly's attempt to court Horace Vanderguild without him being aware of it. Cornelius (played by Josh Perilo, junior), an employee of Horace, tries to find a woman for himself. He finds her in Irene Molloy, played by Ali McLarney, junior.

The members of the cast made new friends along the way. "I met many new interesting people that will likely be friends for the rest of my life," said Edie Anderson, senior.

Stage crew prepared the props for "Hello, Dolly."

by Jeff Darst

The 1993 Road Show had some minor changes from past years. The absence of a student matinee and the addition of a permanent set were new to the show.

The show ran from March 4-6 with student tickets sold for the first performance. This year's show, "Road Show on the Roof: 79 Years of Tradition," had nearly 50 acts that displayed the talents of Central students. Drama, music, dance, variety, and comedy were all represented by the various acts.

Auditions for the acts were held on the 19-22 of January. Judges included teachers, student managers, and other students. Every day after school, some acts had rehearsals. The two days before the show were set aside for dress rehearsals.

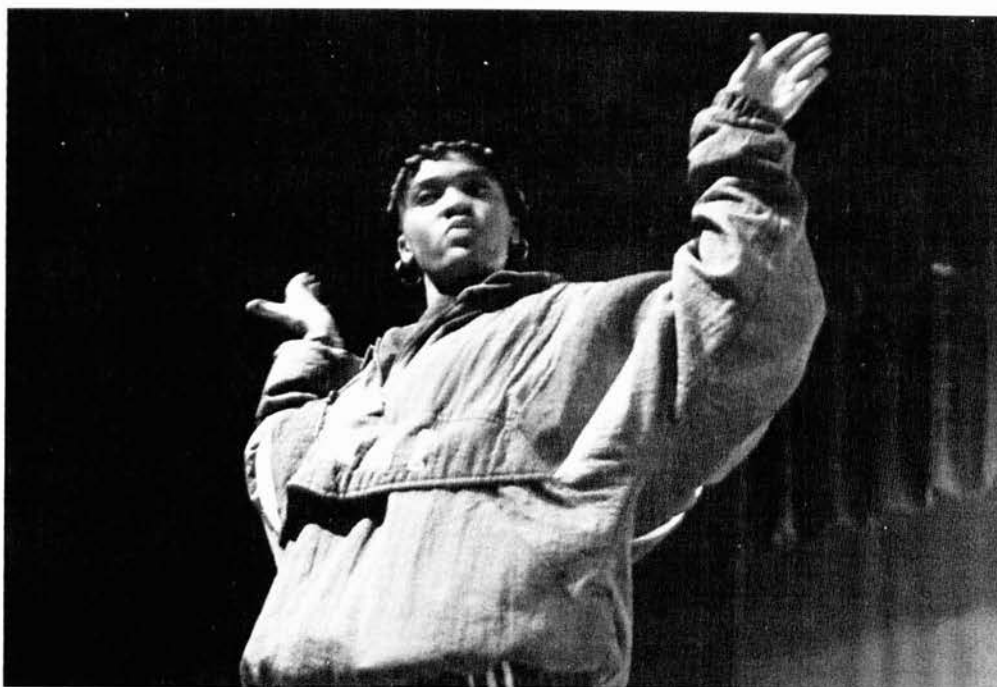

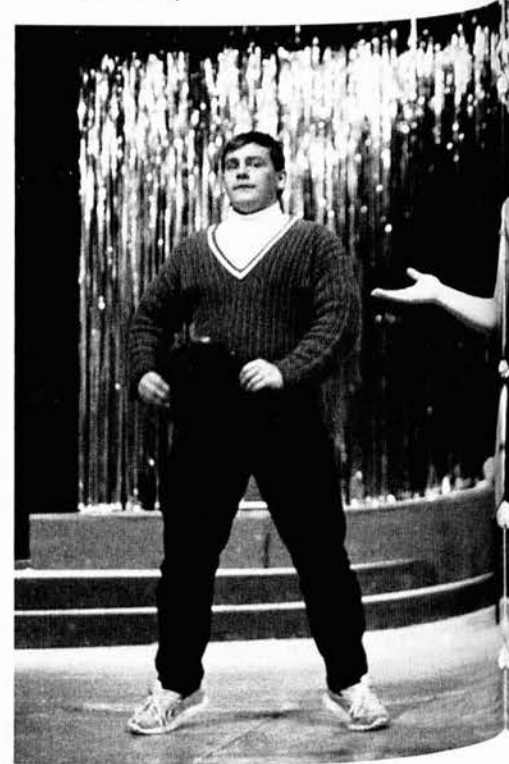

This year, seventeen students were designated student managers. Road Show was directed by Mrs. Georgeson.

An oldie but a goodie, Central ROTC hits triple digits, moves to future

by Jeff Darst

Nothing outlasts the Central ROTC. It keeps going and going and going . . . for 100 years, that is. Second semester of the 1992-1993 school year marked the centennial of Central's Military Science Department.

The CHS ROTC classes teach a variety of skills, according to Major Yost, Military Science Department Head. They practice drill ceremonies and speeches, and they learn leadership skills, map reading, and first aid. Each year in ROTC, the students are challenged with more in-depth work than the previous year.

As in the past, ROTC was involved in many activities outside of the usual school day. Members participated in a canned food drive and a clothes drive. A bake sale was planned, and the profits were to be donated to a local orphanage. A courtesy patrol helps at many school activities such as sporting events, plays, and open house.

ROTC also participates in various competitions throughout the year. CHS attends the color guard, drill team, and orienteering competitions.

"Although it is not required," said Major Yost, "some participants do go into the military." He said that years spent in ROTC in high school could increase a starting paycheck in the military, depending on the involvement throughout the four years.

CHS Drill Team marches through the competition

by Jeff Darst

The Central High Drill Team is an important section of the ROTC department. The group is made up of all ages. They practice before school and occasionally tenth hour in preparation for various competitions throughout the year.

Competitions are held at several locations. The group competed in the OPS meet in early February, the UNO meet in late February, and the Bellevue East meet in early March. The UNO meet consisted of all OPS schools and the two Bellevue Schools. The Bellevue East meet matched teams from all over the Midwest.

Competitions are made up of mandatory marching steps from the military manual, but the order can be decided by each individual group. The marching is done in front of several judges for inspection. The OPS meet separated first year cadets and upperclass cadets, but the other meets had only one category.

The color guard also competes in the meets. They took second in the OPS invitational.

Marksmanship's hard work triggers a successful season

by Jeff Darst

The Central High marksmanship team practices in a room that many students do not realize exists. The rifle range is located in the basement near the band room.

The team practices five days a week nearly every week of the year. The team meets as a class tenth hour every day. Often times, practices will run until 4:30 or 5:00 after school. Tuesdays are "match days" so competitions take the place of practice. That amounts to two and a half to three hours of practice per day.

Competitions are held throughout the city. Central competes against all of the other OPS schools. In addition to the Tuesday dual meets, Saturday usually means an invitational for the marksmanship team.

Master Sergeant Jurin is the first-year sponsor and coach of the marksmanship team. He said this year's team may be one of the strongest teams in Central's history. "It takes a special person to be able to shoot in competition. You can only concentrate on one thing," he said.

Master Sergeant Jurin continued that to be involved in ROTC is not mandatory, but it is encouraged because of liability.

Clubs

beyond the boundaries

by Angela Splittgerber

The different clubs are some of the most memorable aspects of Central. Most students enjoy becoming a part of a club to meet new people and have fun.

Central has many unique clubs that don't stop at any limits. Each club reaches out farther than before to grasp new ideas. Clubs play an important part in a student's social life, providing opportunities for people to meet new friends with similar interests. Students will remember in later years the experiences that they had in clubs and how they dared to go beyond the boundaries.

the market

By Liz Offner

"DECA provides students who may not be considering a business-orientated college curriculum a chance to explore that route before it is completely overruled," said Jon McDonald (12).

This year's DECA Marketing Club was bigger and better than ever. While some students went to Milwaukee for the Central Regional Conference, others were busily making cookies to sell to hungry Centralites during passing periods at school. DECA members also spent many hours preparing for district competitions in Bellevue, state competitions in Lincoln, and nationals in Florida.

Civic, social, and professional activities such as bell ringing for the Salvation Army, donating money to the St. Francis House, working on the annual scavenger hunt, and entertaining guest speakers who gave presentations about careers and the job market were attended every month and financed by DECA activities.

DECA Marketing club

The sponsors of DECA are Mrs. Bunz, Mr. Gaylor, and Mrs. Wiles. "This class of 1993 has as much leadership and talent as some of the best years in the past," said Mr. Gaylor. "They had vision beyond the normal class and their competitive attitudes created a unity and strength that will always be remembered."

When asked about the Milwaukee trip, Suzanne Gaylor (11) said she enjoyed the four-day excursion. "It was fun to visit a different city and I met a lot of new people."

"Competitions in Milwaukee gave my quiz bowl team an opportunity to practice against other teams before the real challenge...state competition." Meghan Stanek (12) said.

"DECA has broadened my horizon and strengthened my foundation of knowledge in the business world," said Corey Bekish (10).

"It's also a great way to meet girls and exchange recipies!" exclaimed Jeremy Mincks (12) who found DECA educational fun.

JCL gives feeling of unity

By Liz Offner

"JCL is one of the fastest growing clubs at Central," stated Dan Bagley (12), state JCL president. "We have approximately one hundred members this year."

Dan explained that the main reason for the club's success is its sponsor, Ms. Ryan. "She's willing to set aside time for the students in the club. Everyone loves her!" said Dan.

Some activities of JCL include the fall hay rack ride, the making of the Homecoming float, which won first place, and the foreign language soccer tournament.

In February, JCL participates in the Latin Certamen, a statewide competition involving knowledge and sports.

"JCL is a great club to be involved in, full of people who want to have fun!" said Sean Gard (12).

Drama Club 'locks-in' to a great year

By Meghan Stanek

"It's a fun club to be in. It allows you to be an individual in a crowd of people," said Beth Bender (11) when asked about the 1992-1993 Drama Club. Beth went on to say that Drama Club is not made up simply of students who participate in the school plays. "Drama Club is for anyone who is interested in acting," said Beth. Although anyone can be a member of Drama Club, most of the actors in Central productions do belong to the organization.

Drama Club, like most other clubs in the school, participates in several activities throughout the year. The Club was involved with the hayrack ride which took place last fall. This annual event, involving many Central organizations, is an activity every year for Drama Club. The Drama Club also holds an annual lock-in during the spring. Ben Fenner (12), former Drama Club member, said, "The lock-in is always a lot of fun. We do some improvisation and have an 'initiation' ceremony for the new members." Drama Club did both intraclub Secret Santas and Secret Valentines this year.

Drama Club tries to hold regular meetings, but with the busy schedules of the members and its sponsor, Mrs. Georgeson, it is often difficult. "We attempt to hold meetings every other Wednesday morning but it's hard to get everyone here that early. During production times or Roadshow rehearsals, it is even more difficult to hold meetings," said Beth Bender.

Thespians show hard work and receive recognition

by Meg Allen

Officers: Kate Duggan, Historian; Jason Ellis, Secretary; Jennifer Jones, Historian; Mrs. Georgeson, sponsor; Wendy Revers, President; Beth Bender, Historian.

Thespians, a national organization, shows the dedication and hard work of drama enthusiasts. To be accepted into Thespians, "One must be in Drama Club, have to participate in at least two Central drama productions, and list the productions that they have been in since their freshman year," Ali McLarney (11) said. "Each item is weighted on a point scale which then qualifies the applicant to be accepted."

Michelle Dowd (12), the president of Thespians said, "We have an initiation ceremony in the spring for all of the members who did not have enough points accumulated by the last application period."

"Because all of the members of Thespians are members of Drama Club, the two clubs try not to overlap the activities," Michelle said.

"Thespians is more honorary based than activity based because we are busy with the Central theater productions and other productions that many of us get involved in," Michelle explained.

When asked about the future of Thespians, Michelle ended that, "There are a lot of dedicated people in Drama which means that the tradition of talent will continue at Central."

Beth Bender (11) relaxes and enjoys a cookie at a club meeting. Both Drama Club and Thespians often meet in the Dramatorium.

Drug Free Youth encourages "good, clean fun"

By Rebecca Garcia

Valarie Hubble (11), Andrea Wieduwelt (10), and Jeremy Smith (11) sit back and relax during a Drug Free Youth meeting.

Drug Free Youth offers Central students a drug-free environment amidst everyday peer-pressure. Students are encouraged to participate in activities without succumbing to the use of drugs and alcohol.

Sarah Gilbert (10) said, "This is a good organization because you are active, not in drugs and evil, but in just having fun. You just get to hang out with your friends and you don't have to worry about drugs getting involved."

Leah Cha (12) agrees, "Drug Free Youth offers an easy-going and relaxed atmosphere. We have had many activities such as bowling and ice skating. I feel this is a worthwhile club and I would highly recommend this club to everyone in the school."

According to Dan Franck (11), "Red Ribbon Week was exciting and I would definitely recommend this club to other students."

Julie McDermott (12) said, "This is a social group with many responsible people. We make sure no one feels left out, or that they have nothing to do."

Native American club brings together cultural history with current events

By Rebecca Garcia

Native American Club is an organization that encourages all students to learn more about the native people of our lands.

According to Mrs. Wheeler (sponsor), "We try to explore the heritage of Native Americans in fields such as their beliefs, rituals, and history. We hope to educate Native Americans and non-Native Americans on contributions of this ethnic group."

Dawn Mace (9) said, "People should be more aware of our culture."

Christina Mace (11) said, "It's a way to learn about and explore our culture."

This group met every Wednesday in room 229. They had guest speakers, ethnic dancing, films, poetry readings, and did volunteer work at the Native American Center.

Le cercle francais' takes members to new heights!

By Liz Offner

"French Club is a fun way to connect outside activities with classroom responsibilities," said Meg Allen (12).

As always, Central's French Club had a very busy year. The activities planned early in the year promised fun and excitement for the large group of French speaking Centralites.

A popular outing with French Club is apple picking. "There is nothing like eating an apple picked right off the tree," said Joey Morley (11). The students went in carpools to a near-by orchard where they filled bag after bag with delicious apples to eat and sell.

Another activity French Club is involved in, is the fall foreign language soccer tournament. This year they won first place, which tells something about the club's strength and unity. "Competing in a sport against other foreign language clubs brought us together and everyone actively played a part. I think this is why we're number one!" explained Schae Lewis (11).

French Club also participated in the making of a homecoming float, a superb progressive dinner and the annual French Convention in the spring.

GNHS: the cultured club

By Rebecca Garcia

German National Honor Society has had an interesting year this year. They have had many fun activities. Some of these activities include a hayrack ride, Christmas caroling, and a trip to see the Nutcracker at the Orpheum Theater.

Ryan Shoener (11) said, "This is my first year in German National Honor Society, but I expect that this year will help build my interest in joining again next year." Heather Olsen (11) feels the same. "GNHS is very fulfilling and I learn more about the German language and culture by participating in the club's activities."

"I have really had a lot of fun this year. I think we have a really good group and hopefully next year we will have even more students become interested in joining," said Angela Splittgerber (11).

Frau Jung (sponsor) summed up the year by saying, "We had a really great group and we had a lot of fun learning about people from another culture and another part of the world."

FNHS spreads good cheer

By Liz Offner

"French National Honor Society is working to have fun along with active consciousness," said Nicole Goldenstein (12).

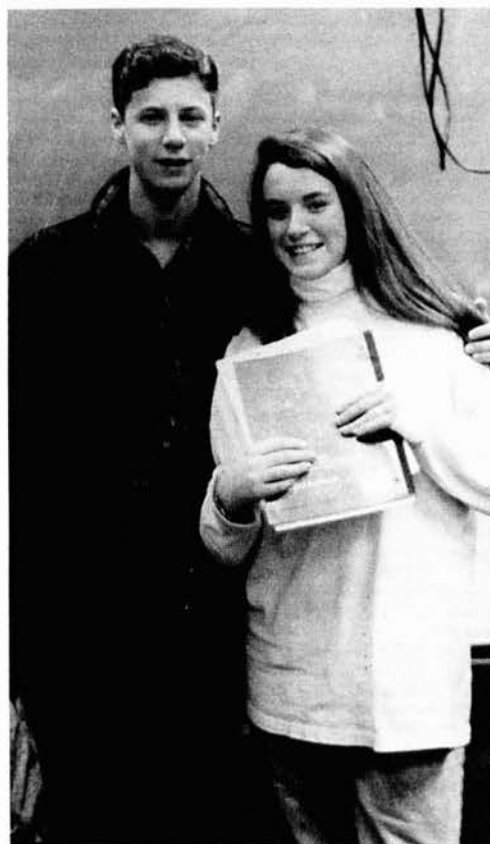

"Our goal is to be more of an organization that actually does activities instead of following French Club's lead," added Meghan Stanek (12).

This year FNHS sponsored a needy family during Christmas time. The students paid for dinner and presents and added holiday cheer to those less fortunate.

Members of this club also attended a French musical and dined at the French Cafe.

German Club brings different culture to classroom

By Rebecca Garcia

"German Club has started off the year with a bang." This is the general feeling of the students who are taking part this year. "German Club is fun and it is a great way to meet new people," said Ericka Pokorski. Titus Casebeer agrees, "German Club is great. We do a lot of fun things and it is a great way to get acquainted with people in other German classes. Frau Brabec is real cool too!"

There have been many fun and interesting activities planned for the year. In the holiday spirit, they held a Halloween party, to celebrate the day of the dead. Frau Brabec said, "Seeing Jeremy Smith in a red dress at the Halloween-costume party was the highlight of German Club activities." German Club's joint hayrack ride with FBLA was cancelled in the fall only to be rescheduled in the spring. Other activities planned included: ice skating, skiing at Mt. Crescent, secret Santas, and a hike at Neale

Woods.

Many of the students who participate in the club, find that their interest in the language is heightened by joining a club where the language is stressed. The meetings are conducted mostly in German. According to Frau Brabec, "the students learn more of the language this way because they use it in everyday context."

Spanish club unites students

By Liz Offner

Spanish Club sponsors, Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Plata, together with the many members, planned numerous activities for the 1992-93 school year. They took part in the homecoming float contest, of which they took 2nd place. Bowling and rollerskating were also on the agenda along with secret Valentines in February. Members also pooled their money together and rented a recreation hall for a party.

This year a foreign exchange student from Spain, Veronica Echevarria (12), joined Central's Spanish Club. She felt that participating in the club helped her to adapt to the culture shock of an American school. "Spanish Club helped me to meet new people and I think we not only had fun but learned from each other," Veronica said.

"Spanish National Honor Society is a great experience, and these past two years have been well worth it," said Tara Weisflock (12).

"I've really had a lot of fun this year. I'm glad I decided to get involved in SNHS," added Karisa Kane (12). A lot of the students involved in SNHS see this as an exciting way to integrate what they learn in the classroom into an everyday setting.

Carey Ishii (12) said, "It has been fun and exciting to spend time with my friends and practice speaking Spanish. Mrs. Plata has been a great help in helping me understand and speak the Spanish language."

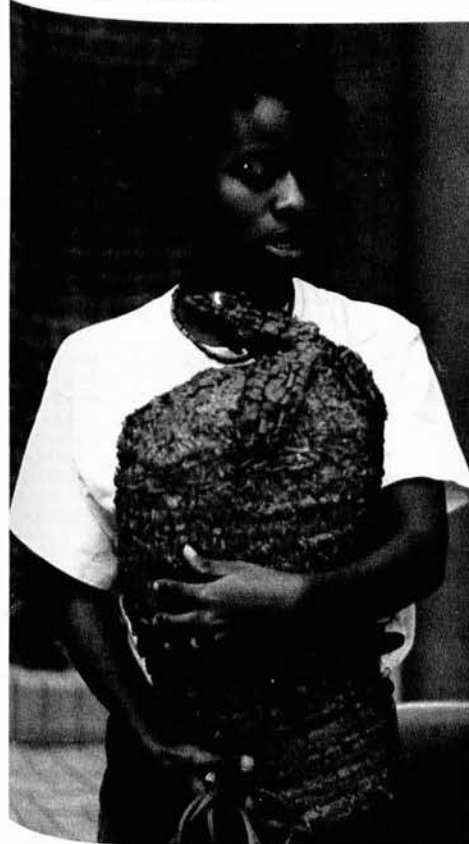

Many activities were in the works throughout the year. SNHS members were actively involved in many civic and entertaining activities.

Emily Moore (12) said she was "impressed at the members' abundant spirit. At times it becomes a friendly competition with other language clubs."

This year Central introduced a new language to its curriculum. Russian is being taught by Ms. Sadofski who is a native of the former Soviet Union. Because the classes were small, Centralites learning this difficult language received individual attention and thus caught on quickly.

Although the activities of this new club were few and far between, members were able to integrate their learning into a plethora of information.

"When I signed up to take this class, I thought that it would be difficult. However, I was pleasantly surprised at the lack of difficulty in this class," said Shelley Sirois (12).

The future of Central's newest language "looks bright as the interest in the Russian language increases," said Bill Tice (11).

"The students can learn a lot from a teacher who is from the former Soviet Union," said Tiffany Lehn (12).

al Spirit Club rallies for the purple and white

By Liz Offner

Spirit club is a small but effective organization that promotes activities that unite students and creates excitement and positive spirit among the student body.

"It's not a white or black thing, but a joint effort to promote school spirit and bring unity to the class of 1993," said Quatesha Kern (12).

Although the club died out in 1990 due to lack of participation, Quatesha saw a need for it now, and she asked Mrs. Georgeson if she could start the club again.

The members of Spirit Club are involved in activities such as: clean up week, bake sales, volunteer services, and assorted pep rallies.

Spirit Club has approximately 20 members. The group tries to meet as often as possible but usually meets only once a week.

Math club members prepare, practice, compete, and the "Winner takes all!"

By Rebecca Garcia

Math Club is an organization that includes some "rather intelligent students," said Michelle Dowd (12).

Most of the Math Club members are enrolled in Enrichment Math 6th and 7th hours. Mr. Waterman (sponsor), teaches this class. Some members help teach other math classes. For example, Mike Rolleigh (12), teaches a sophomore enrichment class during these periods. The students that teach receive credit for teaching these classes.

The Math Club members also have a tutoring service available to students who need extra help in math. Students can usually find club members ready to help them in room 317.

Some activities that the club participates in are various competitions and trips. In March, the members took a trip to Chicago to see assorted museums. These students go on the trips to compete in different competitions. "From a lot of the competitions come a lot of winners," said Mike Rolleigh.

These students practice and prepare all year for the American High School Math Exam. This is a comprehensive math test for all eligible high school students.

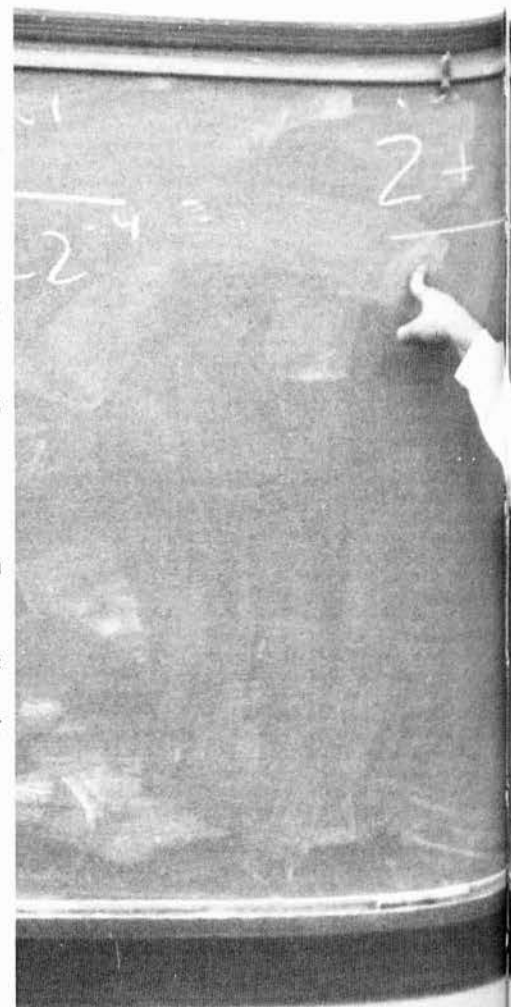

"I laughed, I cried, it was an emotional rollercoaster," said Ric Fenton (12). This is one student's view that many members agree with.

Jeremy Fenton (10), feels that, "Mr. Waterman is one of the most gifted teachers we have."

Mike Rolleigh (12), shows the 6th and 7th hour enrichment math class how to solve problems from their homework.

MACESA: knowing and growing at CHS

By Rebecca Garcia

MACESA is a club which actively supports minority students interested in pursuing engineering as a career. The sponsors, Mrs. Arroyo and Mrs. Els, have seen an increase in the popularity of the club as the need for qualified minorities in the engineering field has become greater.

The club not only focuses on engineering as a career but puts a special emphasis on the importance of high academic standing for minorities.

"Many students are not aware of the growing demand for engineers. This is definitely a career worth pursuing and joining MACESA is a step in the right direction," said Thatcher Taylor (12).

"I have a lot of fun, and I know that this club is giving me a start for the future," said Dawn Willis (12).

Thatcher Taylor reads a note during a MACESA meeting and uses his hands to emphasize the point.

Dawn Willis (12) goes over the structure the club will follow throughout the coming year.

Mrs. Arroyo discusses current events in the engineering field and how there is an increasing need for qualified minorities to fill these positions.

Business experience gained through FBLA

By Rebecca Garcia

Future Business Leaders of America involves business students in grades 9-12. FBLA helps students develop career, civic, and personal responsibility.

Activities include professional guest speakers, business tours, community service, competitions at different levels, and experiences that develop a positive self-image.

Many students join because they can not join DECA. FBLA offers business students an alternative for business clubs.

Sponsor Mr. Fenn said, "This group has been a sheer pleasure to work with. They are quick to grasp all aspects of the business community." Miss Lenner (co-sponsor) agreed, "We've had alot of fun getting to know each other and the business world."

Boys Volleyball flies for second year

By Rebecca Garcia

This is the second year that mens volleyball has been offered at Central. It offers young men a chance to play a well-liked sport that before, was only offered to girls.

This year there are two teams; an A squad and a B squad. The reason for having two teams is because of the number of interested players. Mrs. Wiles (coach) said, "There were so many young men that tried out and wanted to play that we allowed for two teams."

According to Todd Coniglio (12), "We have a lot of fun and there is a good sense of teamwork."

The teams play on Monday and Wednesday nights at Bellevue College.

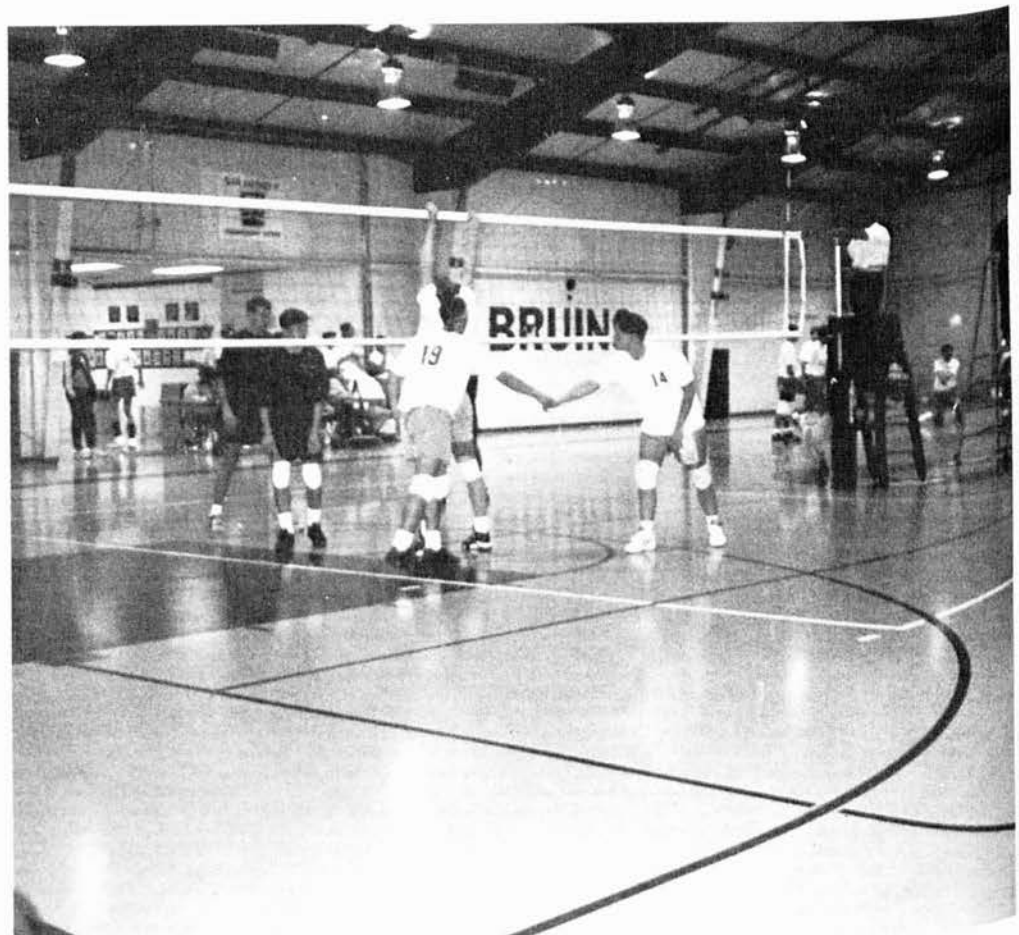

Dave Lawler (11) said, "Having men's volleyball gives guys a chance to play a sport they couldn't otherwise get involved with."

Softball takes home

By Liz Offner

This year marked Central's second softball season and the excitement was greater than ever. The teams consist of one Varsity and two JV, but there was no segregation between the girls.

"Softball was a terrific bonding experience for all of us!" said Jessica Carlson (11).

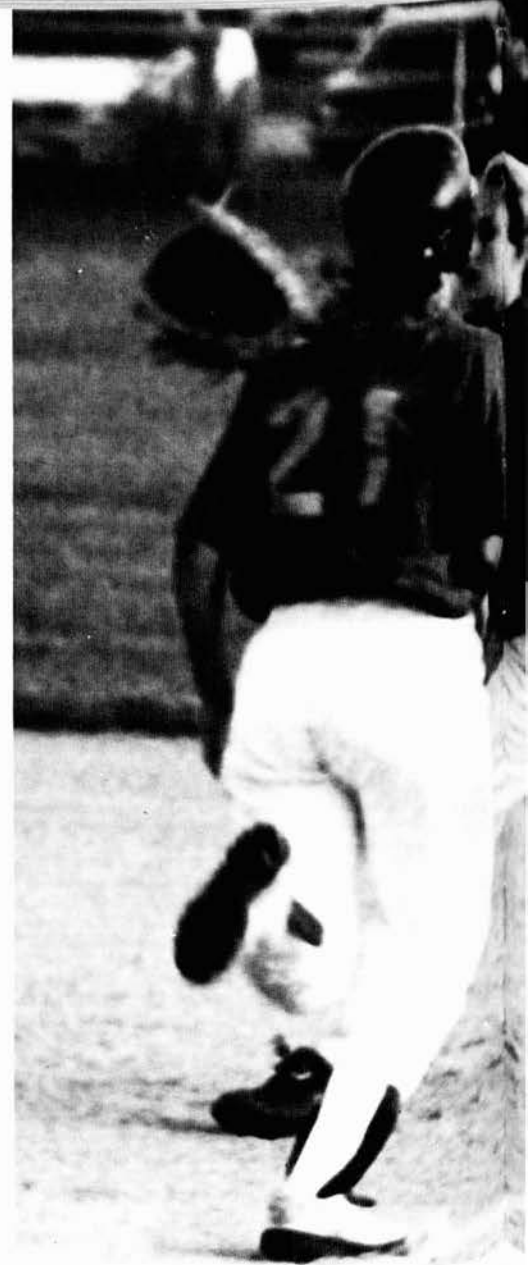

"Not only have we come together as a team but as friends, too," added Laura Rasmussen (12).

Mr. Custard was the club's sponsor. The varsity coaches were Mr. Kozak and Mr. Benton. The JV coaches were Mr. Seidl, Mr. Ahlvers, and Mr. Herbert.

"Even with just one year of experience under our belt, we were a lot more organized this year. I can't wait for next year!!" exclaimed Katie Kovek (10).

Anthropology club takes a look at the past

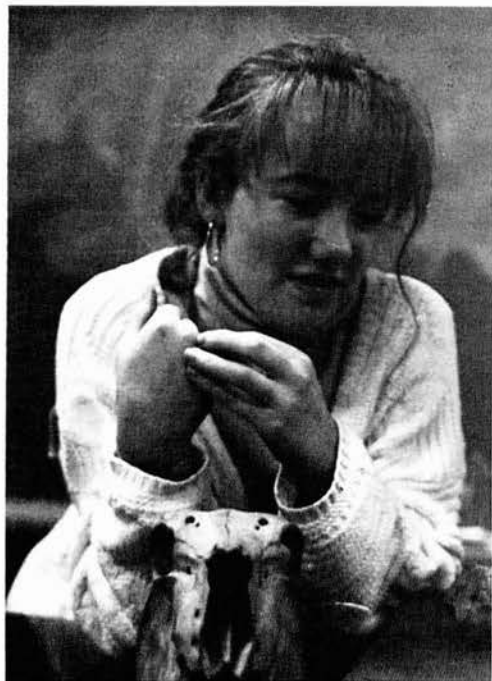

By Rebecca Garcia

"I really learned a lot in Anthro Club," said Alicia Connor. "We study primitive man and his cultures," said Debbie Townsend. According to the members, they do a lot of cleaning of artifacts that they find on their excavations.

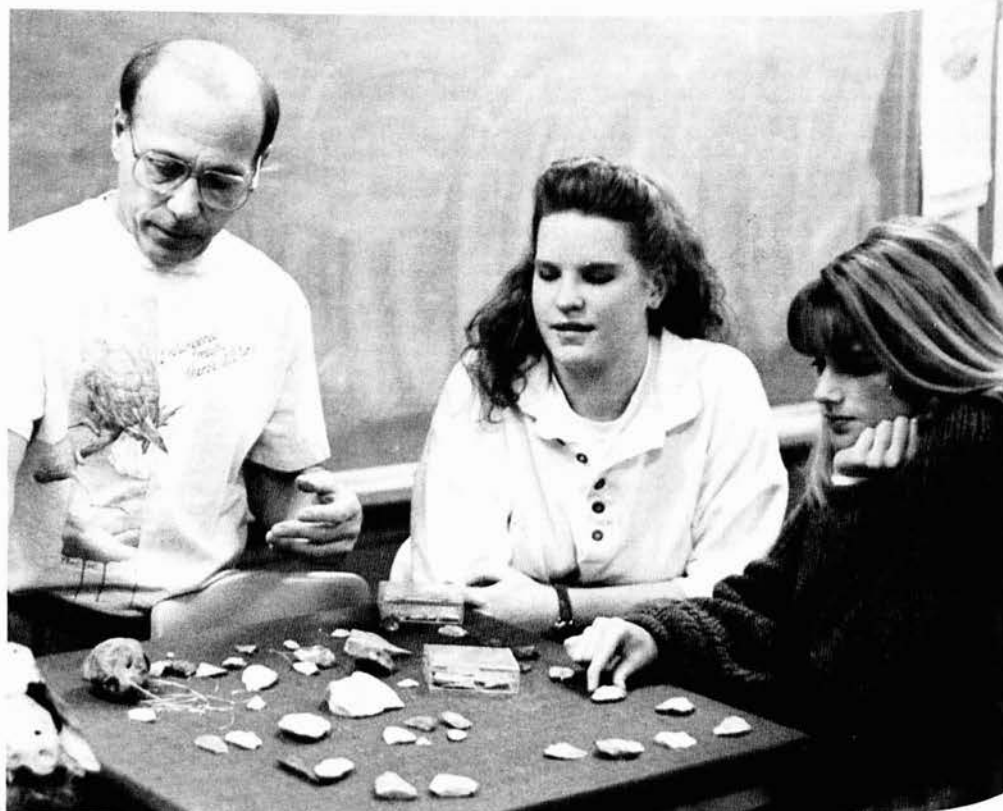

Among other activities, the group goes to such digging sites as Schram Park and many sites in and around Louisville, Nebraska. Anthropology Club meets about once or twice every two weeks.

Mr. Kubik, sponsor, commented, "It's great to see the young people becoming involved in their origin. We study many of the native people of areas in Nebraska." Mr. Kubik has been on a lot of digs and excavations himself. He hopes to show this year's group the excitement of studying the past and present cultures.

Physics club, a meeting of the minds

By Liz Offner

Physics Club was very busy preparing for state-wide competitions to be held at UNO and Creighton.

The competitions challenged the minds of many physics students who had to apply what they learned in class to new and interesting obstacles.

The mind-boggling tasks included: preparing a box to hold and protect an egg through a fall, inventing a car which would run only on one battery, and building a bridge using the ideas of tension and dimension.

"Physics Club has pushed me to apply what I have learned and at the same time has sparked my interest in solving mysteries of the physical world," said Jeff Berg (12).

Craig Lee (12) and Jeff Berg (12) manage to smile despite the pressure of such a difficult lab.

Advertising

beyond the buck

by Angela Splittgerber

The ads in these next few pages are symbolic of a student's years at Central. They show a variety of memories belonging to students. Plus, parents enjoy buying ads to bring back memories in print that many students would rather forget.

Along with student and parent ads, many of Omaha's businesses also purchase ads. Without the finances brought in by the sales of ads, the O-Book would not be able to support itself. The O-Book staff greatly appreciates the sale of ads for making it the only self-supporting yearbook in Omaha.

A Graduation Tribute!

I remember it well, it was June 20, 1975
Along came Clint, screaming to let you know he had arrived

Everyone would remark what a darling little boy
He filled our lives with happiness and lots of joy

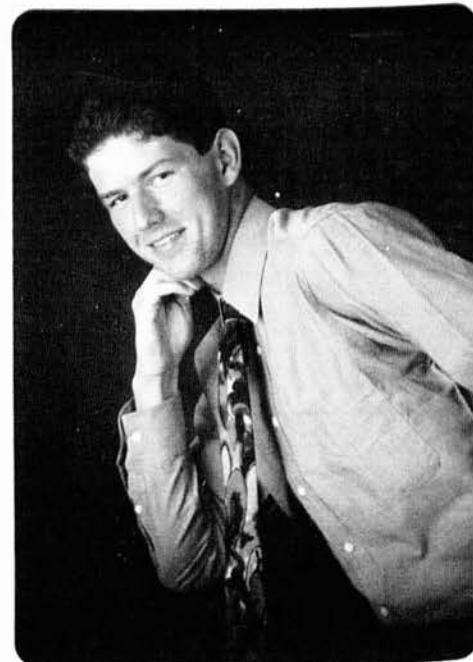

Being the youngest of our family clan
Gave him the strength to grow up and be a fine young man

Golf has become a part of his life in the last few years
He is a very good golfer and from all of us gets three cheers

We wish him well in his future plans whatever life has for him in store
Clint will certainly do his best and always give you just a little bit more

Look out world you are about to see Clint Starks coming your way
With success, charm and perhaps the greatest golfer of our day!!

*Love,
Mom*

Wrestlers on 'Top of the Nation'

By Jaimie Luckritz

Five Central wrestlers spent a week in Estes Park, Colorado, at the "Top of the Nation" Wrestling Camp this past summer.

One of the most exciting experiences was meeting some of the best wrestlers including Mike Stanley, Les Anderson, Johnny Nemo, and Olympic gold medalist, Kevin Jackson.

Jeff Casady, junior, felt that Jackson's seminar on how he prepares for his matches helped him. "He (Jackson) talked about having a positive attitude, no matter if he wins or loses, and that's something that I want to have this season," Jeff said.

Each day they trained for about 6 hours, which were broken up into 3 sessions each lasting 2 hours. "It was a lot of hard work, but I learned new moves that will definitely improve my season," Mike Watkins, senior, commented. Sophomore Phillip Narducci added that he learned different techniques and escape moves.

The most rewarding experience was meeting people from all over the United States and seeing the different styles of wrestling according to Ty Sievers, junior, and Jason Lawrence, sophomore. "Camp was a lot of fun and I want to go back next year," Jason said.

Coach Kubik commented that this was the seventh year that he and the Central wrestlers attended camp. "I feel that the wrestlers who attend camp generally have winning seasons," Kubik said.

Colophon

The 1993 Central High O-Book consists of 248 pages and was completed in six deadlines, beginning in October through March. The first sixteen pages are done in full color. Taylor Publishing Company completed this book in Dallas, Texas. The cover is a duro-litho gray paper screen. The lettering on the cover is purple debossed. The entire book is camera ready with the use of the Macintosh Computers and the Laser Writer. All copy within the book is done in avant garde.

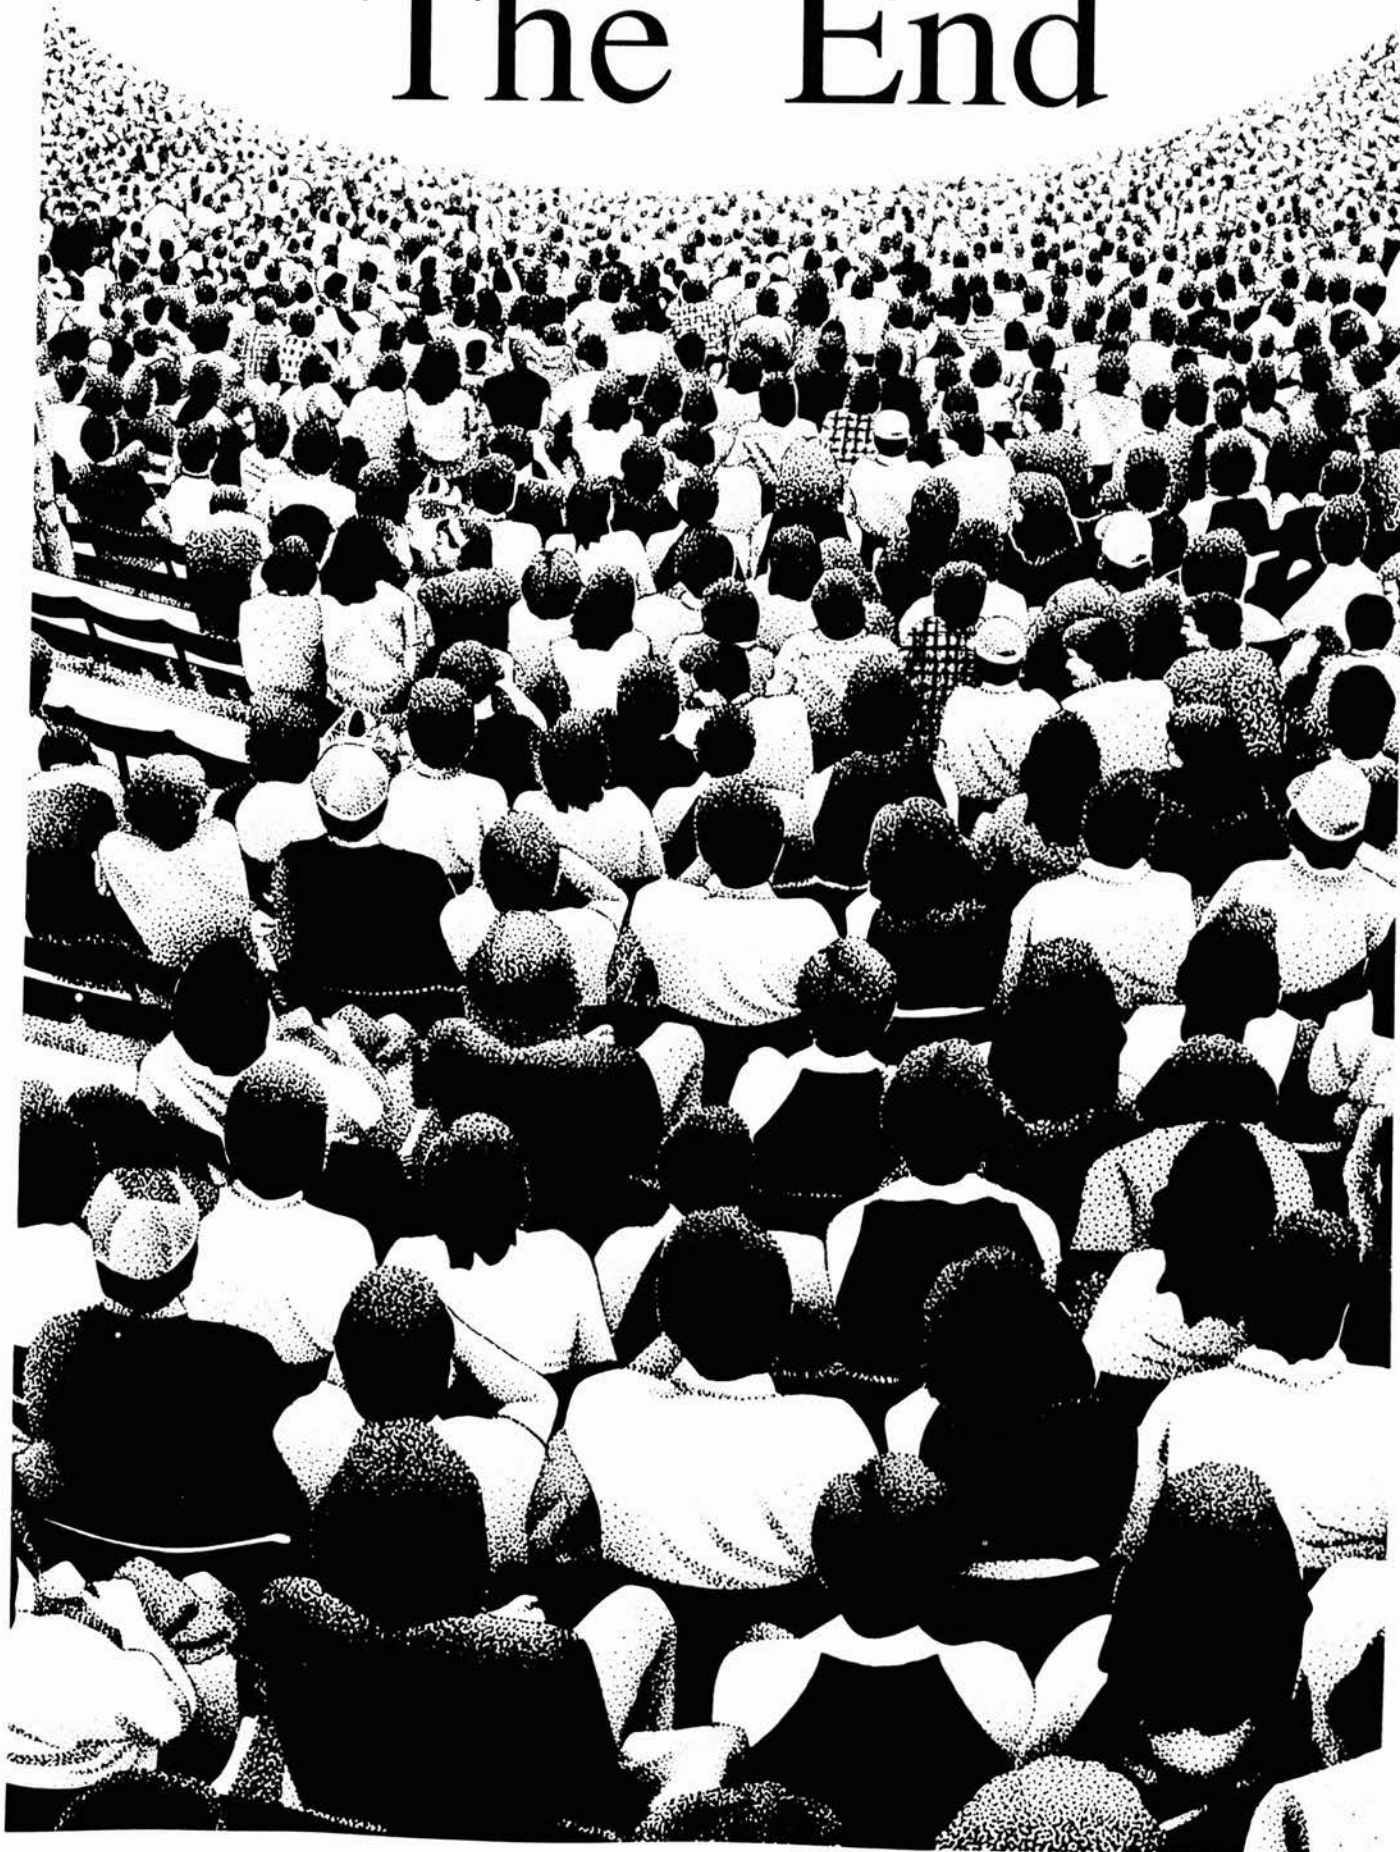

This book would not be possible without the dedication of the entire staff. Special thanks to Mr. Gaherty for his guidance and congratulations for completing his 30th year without missing a yearbook deadline. The staff is:

The End

by Angela Splittgerber

This book represents the trials and tears of 25 people throughout the school year. Despite the hardships, such as the electricity going out in March, we've managed to complete another excellent yearbook.

All Central students of the 92-93 school year can be proud to have survived another hectic year of higher education. This year will be remembered fondly by all who have come in contact with Central. This book has gone beyond words to represent the emotions of a school full of students. The memories are not only of events, but also of how students reacted to the world around them.

Of course, not everything has been captured on these pages, but this book can serve as a reminder of how the 92-93 students went beyond all limits to achieve new goals. This reaching for the best is something that can benefit students as they move forward in life. This book not only represents the past, but it tells of things to come. The future is for each and every student to create according to his/her goals.

In each student's pursuit of his/her goals, the O-Book staff wishes them a happy life full of wonderful memories.

Ms. Roberts,
I have enjoyed the last two years. I hope the rest of your life is prosperous.

MS. ROBERTS!

It was great being in your class (especially when I got a 100+1.0). Your lectures were always entertaining enough... I got the feeling you really care for the material you are teaching, as well as for those "interesting little details" that accompany it. In 4-5 years when my little brother goes to central I hope you will be his teacher (you'll get a kick out of how different from me he is). I hope I'll get to see you again. Have a good life, and don't let those adolescents get to you!

My number - 344-8658

1993 track off and running

By Sarah Bond

The 1993 Central track team got off to a running start this season. Many relay teams as well as field event participants were able to place in the relay meets of the beginning of the season. The team continued its success in the invitational meets later in the season.

Track and field begins long before the actual meets take place. During the winter months, the track team members conditioned by lifting weights. March 1, practice began and the team started with tear down exercises and then slowly began the build up process which continued throughout the season.

The track team participated in an invitational meet almost every weekend from the end of March to the beginning of May. These competitions included a trip to Grand Island for the Grand Island Invitational, a trip to Lincoln for the Lincoln High Invitational, and the Dick Jones Invitational which was hosted by Central. Underclassmen dual meets were supposed to be held about once a week but many were cancelled due to rain.

Sarah Moss said that track "was a good experience that was a lot of hard work but also a lot of fun."

Baseball hits and slides under opponents and weather

By Ryan Shoener and Tim James

Central's baseball teams started the season again, hitting the long ball and stealing bases.

The teams were all strong this year. All teams ended up fighting the weather, causing several rain outs.

"We were fortunate to only lose two starters, and we kept all our outfield and pitchers," said Pat Driscoll (12).

Varsity strength was due to its returning members but still had improvements to make.

"We still needed to make individual improvement. We had to have the attitude that we're going to go all out every game and take state," said Jason Kirchevel (11).

This year's debut of rookie varsity coach Steve Eubanks was a great one. He filled in comfortably after last year's coach, Elvis Dominguez, took a coaching position at Creighton.

"My goals were just to develop the kids into good student athletes, but they've shown me they can also work very hard," said Coach Eubanks.

Also making tracks on the base paths were the junior varsity and freshman teams. The j.v. was coached by Paul Blazeitch and the freshman team by Ken Rieschl.

The teams showed their efforts to work and proved that the future has nothing to worry about for Central baseball.

"The coaching staff has done well with the kids and I'm very proud of all their success and hard work," said Coach Eubanks.

Hard work and success; two words that go hand-in-hand in life. They also apply to Central's baseball this year and in the years to come.

Golf team long off tee; shows touch on greens

By Jeff Darst

The Central boys' golf team entered the 1993 season with high hopes. With most of the top players returning, the team's goal was to make the state tournament.

Central competed in several matches with one or two other teams, and they played in many invitational tournaments.

Unlike past years, the team's home course was Shoreline Golf Course, in Carter Lake, Iowa. They practiced and held their own tournament at Shoreline. Shoreline had a practice green and a driving range that were occasionally available to the team.

Coach Jim Galus was again the sponsor of the golf team. An addition to this year's team was Coach Jim Kemp, who played golf for Central when he was in high school.

Clint Starks, senior, said, "This year's team is really strong, and they have a great chance at taking state. Coach Galus and Coach Kemp have some good years to come."

Girls' Tennis swings back into the season

by Meg Allen and Jennifer Insinger

"Despite the rain outs to start their regular season, the girls' tennis team kept up their regular practice schedules," said Mr. Andrews, the head tennis coach. "Everyday we practice till 5:30 p.m., unless we have duels which are on Tuesdays and Thursdays," Liz Crossman (10) said. The team practices at Dewey Park. The team has been working on strategies and techniques. "I think we work well together as a team," Liz Crossman said.

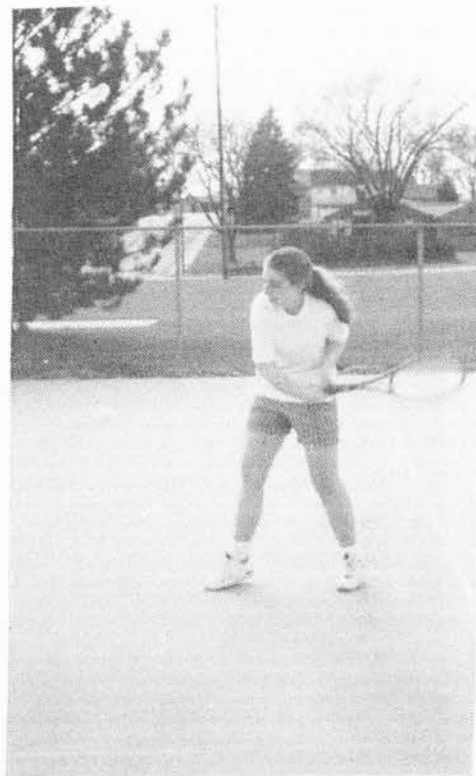

Libby Broekemeier (10), said "A lot of people from last year have gotten a lot better."

Mimi Douglas (10) agreed and added, "There is a lot more dedication this year. I like playing from year to year. This is my fourth year playing tennis."

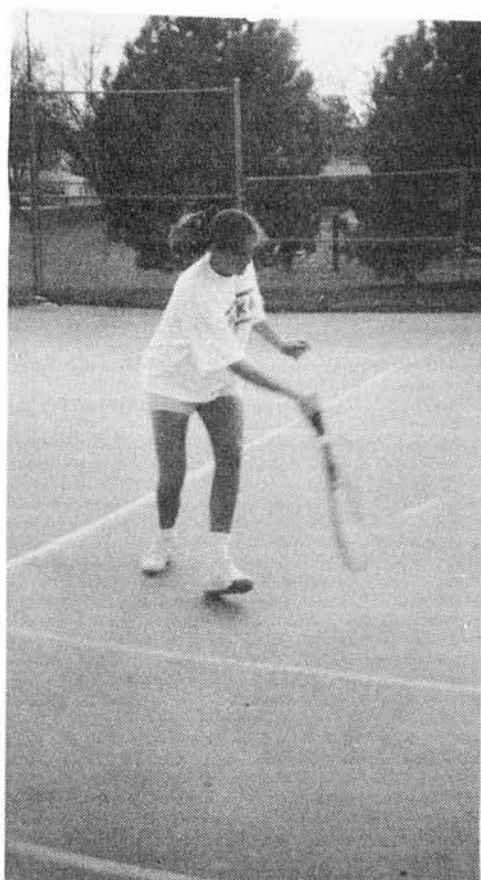

"Out of the fifteen players this year, eight are returning from last year and seven new players," said Mr. Andrews.

Mr. Andrews also said, "There is a lot of diversity in the amount of time everyone puts forth and the level of ability."

Mimi Douglas (10) said, "The Metro and State tournaments are always a lot of fun because you meet and see people that you have met at clinics and lessons in past years."

Girls' varsity soccer 'blames it on the rain'

by: Briana Hooi

The girls' varsity soccer team kicked off to a slow start in the 1992-1993 spring season. They were rained out of many of their early games and were forced to play as many as four games a week to finish their league play before the District Tournament.

The weather hurt not only the team's ability to perform, but also their morale. Jenny Berg, junior, said, "I feel like we had a real slow start to this season. It's been hard to come together as a team this year."

Despite their slow start, the team tried to maintain a positive attitude. Senior and co-captain, Laura Rasmussen, said, "Things haven't come very easy for us this season, so with our hard work we have learned to appreciate what we do get."

Mr. Grillo, girls' varsity soccer coach, described his team as, "dynamic, enthusiastic, and exuberant."

Michelle Queen, junior, defended the team's losing record by saying, "We were in a transitional year."

J. V. girls 'kick off' season of high hopes

By Jaimie Luckritz

Despite the snow, rain, mud, and below freezing temperatures, the junior varsity team kept its spirit up. "It was really disappointing that so many games were cancelled because of the weather," Sara Egger, junior, said.

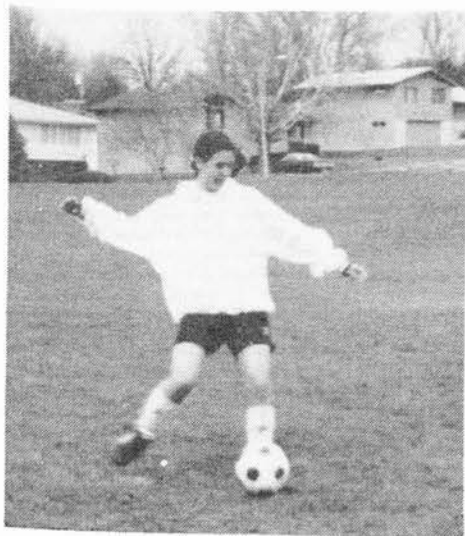

The team did really well overall, " Fran Anania, junior, commented. "We're just getting used to one another and learning from one another so that the team will come together for an even better season next year," she said. "We don't want people to just overlook us; we want them to know who we are," Nadia Blazeovich, freshman, said.

The talent of the team ranges from those who have been playing for years and those who just started playing this year. "Even though some of us are not as experienced as others," Lisa Hinder, junior, said, "our enthusiasm made playing fun and created a positive attitude."

Varsity soccer rebuilds after state title

by Meghan Stanek

Soccer season has begun, and this year the whole school has high hopes for the team. "After last year's state championship, there seems to be a lot of pressure on the team to perform well," said captain Nate Heimuli (12). For the first time in many years, Central claimed its first state soccer championship. Many of the starting members of the '92 team graduated last spring. In fact, there are only five returning lettermen.

"It's a young team this year, but so far we have played well. The team is gaining the experience they are going to need to win another state title in a few years," said captain Jeff Berg (12). Freshman player Jeff Driscoll agreed, "I was thrilled when I found out I had made the varsity team. Playing against seniors in high school is completely different than any game I have played in the past."

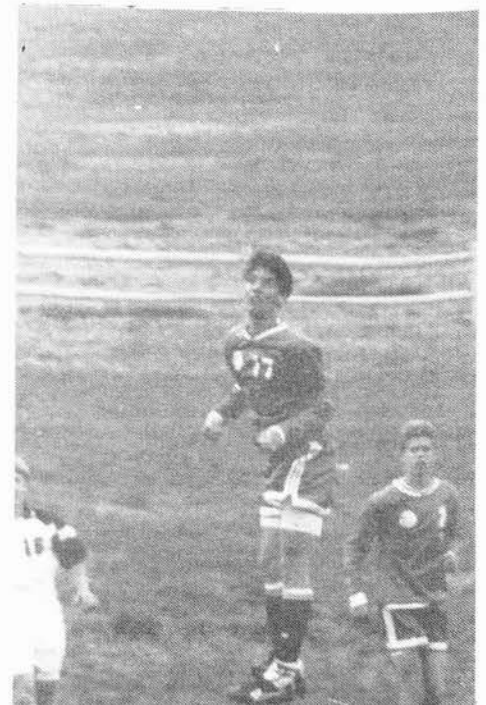

Pat Fuerstenau (12) responded positively when asked about this year's team. "The team is really different than last's, but just as fun."

This year's JV boys' soccer team had a rough start due to the rainy spring season. "The team's spirit has been affected by the weather," said junior, Mark Horton. Even with the rain, the boys were able to pull off an exciting season.

Coach Frank Tworek, from Norris Jr. High, returned for a second season with the JV team. "Mr. Tworek had some good techniques and the team was learning a lot from him," said Chris Walters (9).

Russ Rumbaugh (11) said, "I thought our team was still really young and inexperienced, but we learned a lot."

The team started off the season with a win against Gross High School. James Chipasula (11) responded enthusiastically that although he only scored one goal, he had played well. "We had a really exciting season with everyone improving," said Mark Horton (11). He added that this years season had polished his skills to play varsity next year.

The good spirits of the JV team made for a fun, competitive year.

Students dance among the 'Treasures of the Deep'

by Erica Corwin and Tiffany Lehn

"Treasures of the Deep" was held April 17 in the courtyard at Central. The dance began at 8:00, and it concluded at midnight. Student Council sponsored the Spring Prom and was responsible for the decorations and clean-up.

The 1993 Prom court included Edie Anderson, Nicole Goldenstein, Quatesha Kern, Tiffany Lehn, and Rachel Newsome for queen candidates. Dan Bagley, Ryan Basye, Jeff Berg, Ben Fenner, and Demetrius Richards were the king candidates.

Prom was a special night for many people. Cale Herreman, senior, said "Ordinarily, I probably wouldn't go to something like Prom, but for one reason or another, I went, and I enjoyed it."

As an addition to Prom, PEP sponsored a post Prom celebration at the Ranch Bowl that lasted until 4:00 a.m. At post Prom, students enjoyed pool, bowling, dancing, and free pizza. Prizes were given out as well.

"It was really great getting together with everyone after Prom was over and not having to be dressed up. I definitely think they should do it again next year," said Michelle Kaash, junior.

Mrs. Storm, Student Council sponsor, said, "For my first year, I thought prom went very well. The success was due to everyone's hard work and a combination of ideas that pulled together."

Military Ball celebrates Cadet Battalion Commanders and 100 years of CHS ROTC

by Jeff Darst

This year's Military Ball was held March 11, 1993 in the Peony Park Ballroom. All Omaha Public Schools were represented, including seven high schools and two junior highs.

The primary purpose of the Ball was to honor the seniors, especially the Cadet Battalion Commanders. Leslie Snyder, senior, was honored as deputy brigade commander. The deputy brigade commander is the second highest rank in all of the OPS high schools. Each of the Battalion Commanders was made a full colonel in the Brigade staff.

According to Major Yost, three weeks before the Ball, the seven Battalion Commanders met in front of a review board made up of members of the Army National Guard. They were interviewed and their academic and ROTC files were examined. Each Battalion Commander was then placed on the Brigade Staff.

The Brigade Staff then plans the Brigade review for the first week in May. The Brigade Review is the year-end parade for ROTC.

The theme for this year's dance was "100 Years of Excellence," because it was sponsored by the JROTC of Central, who is celebrating their 100th year of ROTC.
