IN THE LIGHT OF OTHER DAYS

The hour-hand pointed at twelve and still an over-studious Junior, who the boys said would rather read than eat, pondered a sentence in Cicero which would not translate. His head ached and he could scarcely keep his eyes open, so when he heard the clock strike twelve he leaned back in his chair for a short rest.

Almost immediately the light of the lamp by which he had been studying began to fade away, but as soon as the room was in total darkness there was a rush and a roar and when our friend, whose name was Theodore Cram, opened his eyes he found that a wonderful transformation had taken place around him. He now found himself in a small room, the walls of which were without wall-paper, pictures or ornamentation of any kind. The walls were made of a glassy substance which shined so brightly that the room was lighted by its shining surface alone.

This state of affairs was quite startling, but on looking across the table an object was seen which was even more curious. It was certainly a boy, but a very extraordinary one. On his head he wore a close-fitting metal cap, and upon his nose was perched a huge pair of goggles. He was looking steadily at the table in front of him and seemed to be studying something which was written on its surface. Having pinched himself several times to make sure that he was not dreaming, Theodore arose from his chair and walked around the table.

He then saw that this table was an electric book on which the words were written by a continuous electric current, and that when this strange boy at the table wished to turn a page he simply pressed a button beneath the table.

Just at this moment the boy curiosity, looking up from his reading table, perceived Theodore standing by his side. He jumped up quickly and, having removed a kind of plug from each ear and turned off the electric current, shook hands with Theodore and asked him what his name was. This question having been answered, Theodore, his curiosity being naturally aroused, asked this strange being what kind of a person he was, and why he wore those curious contrivances.

His new acquaintance answered him thus: "While you are in the far away class of 1905, I am a freshman and represent the class of 3005. I also am very proud to say that I am a highly developed type of what you ancients called a bookworm. I wear this cap, through which an electric current is always circulating, to stimulate my brain to greater activity, and these electric goggles, by exciting the nerves of the eyes, enable me to read very fast. When you came in I did not hear you because of these little rubber stoppers which I keep in my ears while I am studying. They make it impossible for my mind to be diverted by the noises which are always heard in a large city like this. I find this book entitled: 'Twentieth Century Hieroglyphics,' quite interesting. It is one of the text books in our history department."

Having said these words the Freshman turned and walking abruptly out of a nearby window flew swiftly away into the distance. Theodore thought he could do anything as well as a Freshie so he also jumped from the window. But as he had no wings he immediately started falling and went down, down, down, until with a start he awoke from his dream.

He saw immediately that he could well

WHAT CAME OF IT.

Harry Graham was a Senior. Now of course being a Senior he was a nice boy and of course he likewise knew a great deal. He had lived all the seventeen years of his life away up in the Sand-hills. That is, all but the the three years he had spent in the High School. And now—well! now the height of his ambition had been reached. He was Senior captain of company C. He was proud of his company for they had won the flag for the past three years. And his company was proud of its stalwart young captain, for he was straight and tall as a young sapling. His training on the farm had given him a fine physique. Furthermore the height of his ambition had been reached in another line.

Across from him in Study-room sat a girl. Just a common every-day girl with mud-colored hair and gray-green eyes. Yet she always seemed to be enjoying herself whenever he dared look in her direction, and he wanted very much to be introduced to her. But alas! and alack! he could not possibly bring it about. Her name was Jean Haver-meyer, he knew that much but he wished he knew more. So one day he made a mighty resolve in his heart and said he would make that girl smile at him yet—and he did.

This was the manner of his procedure. Her father was a lawyer, and Harry knew one of the clerks in the office. So one day when he happened to overhear her say that she was going down to get her "Daddy" to give her some more money, he put a handful of courage into his pocket and buttoned his take a lesson from this dream, and, as he did not wish to be connected in any way with the long line of book-worms which would culminate in a person such as the chief character in his dream, decided to turn over a new leaf and quit thinking only of his studies. He then started the good work by leaving the rest of his Latin lesson to finish before school the next morning. J. M. '06.

resolutions up tight in his heart and went down to see that clerk friend of his, hoping that some fate would be kind enough to let "her" be there at the same time. Luck was surely on his side for he had scarcely commenced a diligent study of a law-book (which, by the way, was up-side down) when in she came all rosy and smiling from her brisk walk in the winter air.

She lifted her pretty eye-brows when she saw him there but made no other recognition of his presence. Instead, she entered the private office (being careful to leave the door wide open) and seated herself on the arm of her father's chair, pulling his hair all over his eyes. "Daddy," Harry could hear her say, "I've just got to have some more money—really I have. Why! just think, I haven't had any chocolate creams for a week and I must have some new gloves." And she held up a tiny gloved finger in which she had just succeeded in making a hole. Her father playfully shook his head and tried to look stern, while reaching for his check book. "You dear old Daddy," she said, planting a peck of a kiss on the gray spot at his temples, "You dear old Daddy." This with a bear hug that nearly upset them both.

Harry Graham had been watching this little scene from the corner of his eye and he was envious of the father and daughter chatting together, quite like two chums and enjoying themselves so much. Once he was sure he heard his name mentioned and he looked up to find two gray-green eyes fixed on him for a second then he hastily sought refuge in the dry old law book.

The next day at school she dropped her pencil and he gravely restored it to her; while she, just as gravely, said "Thank You." Lucky for him that he did not see the twinkle in her eyes or know that she had dropped her pencil on purpose. And oh! joy of joys! it had a broken point. He took out his knife and began to sharpen his own pencil most industriously; and she, the little witch—saw and understood.

"Won't you sharpen mine for me too?" She asked sweetly, and Harry Graham spent the rest of that study hour making a point on that pencil that a fairy might have been proud of. When the first bell rang he gave it to her. She laughed across at him and said: "I'll have to break all my pencils if you will sharpen them for me. You must have an awfully sharp knife."

From this day onward dated a flourishing High school friendshtp. He gave her his chevrons and his belt buckle and his frat pin to wear for him. And in return he was the proud possessor of a tiny seal ring with J. H. engraved on it. They went to all the school functions together and she was the Sponsor of his company. Their intercourse was as free and natural as the birds or the flowers on the hill-side. It was taken as a matter of course that these two should be together, and no one thought any more about it. This lasted throughout the year, and at the end of the year they both graduated with honors.

* * * * *

Twenty years afterwards there is a little old faded picture of a girl in a simple white frock, hidden away in the treasure drawer of a prosperous lawyer; and Harry Graham always says that he got his first taste for law while studying his father-in-law's law books one afternoon when he was a Senior.

ALEX CHARLTON, '04.

DREAMS.

To-night I am sitting alone in my study, a miserable, forlorn and forgotten old man. A bachelor? No. A widower? No, for I have a wife and three daughters. Then why forgotten? Because, Oh! dark shadow of my boyhood days, they are ashamed of my old-fashioned opinions, tastes and dress. They long for society, and I for quietness and peace.

Oh! for one moment of the peace I used to have in the tiny log cabin in the backwoods, I was proud to call my home. Tell me, faint shadow, do you remember those days or have I only dreamed them? If only, if only this life were a dream, this life, this wealth, this society, these airs and empty pleasures all were but a dream and I might be playing again with my brothers building houses in the sand.

"Backward, turn backward, Oh! time in thy flight,

Make me a child again just for to-night.

Mother come back from the echoless shore,

Take me again to thy heart as of yore."

From the parlor across the hall, comes a burst of music, the sound of many voices and then I hear my daughter playing something—I think it was Hiawatha. How I hate that piece, the words, the music and the composer.

The fire burns low, and still I sit dreaming in my old arm chair. Plainly, I see in the embers a picture. A sweet faced woman is seated at an old fashioned harpsicord, at her side cluster three boys, barefoot and patched, but clean, and together they sing over the sweet, long-un-heard airs. Faintly, but clearly, I hear their boyish voices singing, "Auld Lang Syne" and "Nearer my God to Thee." What! are these tears? Now, I can hear them singing and their hearts are in the song, "Old Black Joe," and "My Old Kentucky Home." With a thud, the log on the hearth breaks and falls apart and the picture is gone. Aloud, I murmur, "Is there now no music like this?"

Ah! but what is this I see on my table beside a small Upright stands a little old man, his long, curly hair is snowy white and his face is seamed with many wrinkles. But his hands which rest lovingly on the piano, are the hands of a true musician, long, slender and tapering. He speaks to me. Tell me, shadow, am I dreaming? Do you see him too?

"I am Orpheus, the God of Music. I am come in answer to your prayer. Listen!

Abruptly he sat down at the piano breathless. I listened. Would it be "Hiawatha" or "Under the Bamboo Tree?" But no, my fears are groundless, for from under his magic fingers flows a sound so divine, so heavenly that I hesitate to breathe lest I break the spell. I recognize Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata, then the air changes and the beautiful sounds of Mendelssohn's Spring Song float to me to soothe my aching heart. His playing is wonderful; sometimes he uses his fingers and his hand and arm are put to sleep; then his hand alone plays the melody and now his arm brings out the desired tone.

And then he sings and Oh! indeed that is singing. He does not stop to tell me about tone placing, or technique, nor does he use long, incomprehensible words to explain the mystifying Italian method which promises so much and accomplishes so little. He simply sings.

I listen enraptured while he pours forth his whole soul in Schubert's Serenade. I am no longer in my study but out in the woods, listening to "the night wind roving" restlessly through the trees. I can even hear the rustle of the leaves. I can see the lover below his darling's window, earnestly pleading his cause, as my visitor sings. Oh! indeed that is singing.

Suddenly, far too soon, he whirls around. "My dear sir," he says, "that is music. Now, people think too much about being able to play things—it makes no difference how it is played so long as they can read the notes. That is not music at all. All they do nowadays, is hit, hit, hit; illustrating his words by bringing down his fist onto the keys several times. "One should always know just how a tone should sound, should think it out thoroughly before he plays it and then there will be no difficulty in reproducing that tone. Tone interpretation can never be studied too much. Pupils have been heard to murder a piece because they have not interpreted the composer's thought, in writing the piece, correctly. Why, my good sir, you yourself, realize that pieces like the idiotic, so called popular songs of to-day but ruin the pupils taste and leave no room for tone-production."

I lean eagerly forward "Pray, kind sir, will you not play again?" But he is gone, frightened away by the sounds of a human voice.

He is gone and I am alone. Yes, alone, still forgotten, out of date and behind the times, but no longer miserable and forlorn, for I have heard real music. Good-bye, faint shadow of my boyhood days, good-bye. I have no more need of you. The God, Orpheus, has come to take your place.

No wonder strikes, wars, famines and volcano eruptions 1903 was an unlucky year when the sum of have kept the inhabitants of this earth in its component parts equals that horror of fear for their lives most of the time, while horrors—13. Old Father Time must have man's immortal soul has been threatened given the mile-stone an extra heavy kick in on every side. 1904, being a girl, starts out with the fates on her side; let us hope she fact is that 1903 was in many respects a will be more successful than her older brother. year of disasters; wrecks, fires, floods,

To know exactly what to do in an emergency is about half the problem of wisely meeting one. The fire-drill in the High School is a newly revived institution but one worthy of serious thought. The stairways and doors are not especially wide and do not admit the passage of more than five abreast. Were it not for the division of the school into squads, the whole fourteen hundred pupils might be jammed at one doorway. The fire drill prevents this. There was a great deal of fun occasioned by this same drill not long ago and some good-natured ridicule was aimed at the brave life-savers, in the shape of the commissioned officers of the battalion; but those who had the most sport will be only too glad, should need arise, to take advantage of an easy way of exit.

The time has come when maidenhood is supreme; when man's boasted rights are threatened; when all time-honored customs are overthrown and a war on the single state of blessedness is declared. No man's life or heart is safe. The careless and carefree bachelor dare not venture forth into the realm of society but barricades the door of his den and awaits impatiently the coming of a year which is not a leap year. The timid old maid grows hopeful while her more courageous sister advances with valient mein upon the unwitting masculine. Man bows down before the feminine onslaught and submits to his fate with a grace and humbleness that will become him.

MUSIC

On Friday, December 11th, the Elaine society gave a program which, from its musical side, was delightful. Miss Fearon rendered a piano solo and Miss Whitney a vocal solo, both girls doing themselves credit.

There has been too many meetings of the German society to mention each separately but of all it can be said that the society is coming on finely. Thanks to the president, more boys come and sing and the whole society puts more life and vim into the singing than formerly. Miss Ellsberry is the acting accompanist for the society and proves to be a very good one.

On December 11th the Alice Carys gave an entertainment at which the vocal solo by Miss Hughes was most pleasing. Miss Hughes has a very sweet soprano, and as she was accompanied by piano and violin the solo was very effective. Miss Congdon sang that beautiful piece, called "Love's Old Sweet Song." Her voice is very rich and was listened to with pleasure.

Miss Conant played a difficult piano solo, overcoming the difficulty of playing on a "hangy" piano very well. I do not think that any one who listened to the solo would term the article in the first issue of the Register at all too severe. In every pause and above all the crescendos could be heard the incessant squeak of the pedals. And olive oil only costs a dime, too!

Strange how some people will sell the opportunity of hearing fine music for a dime, merely a dime, isn't it?

At the last program, the selection from Rubenstein played by Miss Wood and that from Mendelssohn by Miss Eloise Hillis, were well rendered. They are both masterpieces, full of feeling and grand chords, and were fully appreciated.

In the program, November 4th, the Fuller society acquitted itself well. Considering the size of the society much musical talent was displayed. Miss Gould sang "Life's Lullaby" with good effect, and the piano solos by Miss Sweeton and Miss Charleton were well played.

The Register is glad to welcome into the ranks of accompanists Miss Murelle Barnes, whose star has slowly been rising until it is now just at its zenith. Miss Barnes plays with rare ability and follows the singer with an accuracy not to be equalled except by professionals. The expression and feeling with which she plays lends the singer a feeling of safety that is very satisfactory. Good accompanists, the singer finds to his sorrow, are very scarce.

Now that the football season is over many of the pupils seem to think that there is no need for them to show any interest in athletics until spring brings the baseball season. This, however, is a mistaken idea, for before the base-ball season opens Basket-ball holds sway. From now on until the 1st of April the team will have matched games with teams from several of the surrounding High Schools. Manager Patterson has arranged a game with Sioux City to be played in Omaha on the 29th of January. We play the return game in their city on the 11th of February. He is also corresponding with Lincoln, Central City, Des Moines, Le Mars, Grand Island and Kansas University, and expects to arrange games with most of these cities. This means that the pupils will have to turn out in a body and come to these games. The expenses of bringing these teams here is so great, that unless we do this the Athletic Association will be unable to meet them. This means that basket-ball would necessarily go under. No loyal student will stand for this. Let everyone show their interest by coming to the game with Sioux City.

It is about time for the different classes to begin arranging for the big indoor Athletic Carnival which is held each year to decide the championship of the school. Last year the classes of '04 and '05 tied for first place, and this tie has never been played off. This year each class is determined to win the contest at all costs, and there will certainly be some good work done on that night.

The captain of this year's base-ball team, Miles Lowell, would like to receive the names of all boys who would like to try for the team.

The High School is unfortunate in not having an indoor cage for the men to train in during the winter. Most of the colleges have their men "working out" in these cages now. Creighton College has already begun to practice. Let us be patient perhaps we will have one someday. The prospects are bright for a fine team this year. Nearly all of the old men are back. The only places left open being 3rd base, 1st base and catcher, these being left by Kennard, Robertson and Fairbrother who graduated last year. The manager of the team has not been elected and so no games have been arranged. Several names were submitted to the Executive committee at least a month ago, but the committee seems to have forgotten to elect a manager from these names. B. C.

GYMNASIUM.

A great deal of interest is being shown just now in basket-ball. Representatives from the Sophomore Junior and Senior classes are trying for the various places on the teams. The Seniors and Sophomores each have about fifteen contestants and the Juniors eighteen. The girls have regular days for practice, the Seniors and Juniors going up on Wednesdays and the Seniors and Sophomores on Mondays. Great enthusiasm is shown by all the girls and the contest is very spirited as Miss Higgins is to select the players on their merits in the practice games.

The class work is going on with about the same exercises and drills as the girls have had all the year but now with the addition of new apparatus there will be more variance in the usual order of work. The new apparatus which has been received consists of Indian clubs and wands. The drills with the Indian clubs have already been tried and as the girls found these very interesting they are looking forward to the drills with the wands.

At the last meeting of the Deutscher Verein, three new German songs were learned and the following program was given:

Recitation, "Marienwurmchen," Fraulein Fern Wallace.

Recitation, Schoen ist das Meer, Fraulein Nellie O'Connor.

Recitation, Des Sangers Fluch, Fraulein Helen Wharton.

The Elaines met Friday, December 11th, and gave their James Whitcome Riley program:

Recitation, Selected, Mattie Bliss.

Piano Solo, Selected, Eliz. Fearon.
Reading, Life of James Whitcomb Riley, Bernice Merriam.

Vocal Solo, Two Little Irish Songs, Margaret Whitney.

Recitation, Out to Old Aunt Mary's, Ula Waterhouse.

The Latin Society met Friday, January 8th, and gave a program of which the general topic was Roman Life.

The Roman House, Mary Byrne.

Home Life of Romans, Adele McHugh.

The Education of the Children, Nettie Martin.

Reading from Petronius, Claire Gratton.
Was Cæsar's Body Burned? Dora Olsen.

D. D. S. TRIAL

On Wednesday, December 16th, the Demosthenians tried Richard Hunter for breaking the rules of the society. Clifford Hine and Lyman Bryson represented the society and Joseph Swenson represented the defendant. Mr. Bracelen acted as judge and Attorney T. W. Blackburn as legal adviser. After an abundance of evidence had been introduced, the jury went out, returning in a few minutes with the verdict of guilty. Sentence has not yet been pronounced.

The Alice Cary gave its Christmas program Friday, December 18th:

Piano Solo, Eloise Wood.

Recitation, Birth of Christ, Ruth Johnson.

Debate, Music vs. Art.

Vocal Solo, Claire Gratton.

Reading, Milton's Ode to Nativity, Therese Wallace.

Piano Solo, Eloise Hillis.

On Friday, January 15th, the Junior Hop occurred at Metropolitan Hall. The affair was a great success and all present thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The Lincoln Society at their last meeting gave the following interesting program:

Debate, Resolved That the Army Canteen Should be Re-established.

Aff., Carl Mealen and Guy Robertson.

Neg., Hyman Sugarman and George McKitterick.

Paper, The American Tramp, Lake Duell.

The Margaret Fuller Society at their last business meeting chose light blue and white as club colors and decided to take up parliamentary practice.

The society was delightfully entertained by their president, Ruth Yoder.

The interscholastic debate of the state is to take place in the near future, probably at Lincoln. In this debate are represented eight of the leading high schools of the state and anyone in these high schools may compete, whether boy or girl. Each school is allowed one representative and one alternate. Three years ago our representative, Burdette Lewis, won second place; two years ago Harry Kelley won first place, and last year Joseph Swenson won second place. The preliminary debate which decides our representative and alternate for this year will be on January 29th.

The question is: Resolved That it Would be Better for all Interests That U. S. Should Have Exclusive Control of Any Isthmian Canal Than to Share any Such Control with any Other Power or Powers.

Omaha has the negative and probably the hardest side, but nevertheless our representative will show himself victorious over all difficulties.

EXCHANGE

It seems that the way we have of marking little poems and squibs, taken from other papers, with an Ex. is a very unjust one, as the paper thus copied, or as we say exchanged from, does not get credit for its work or genius in these directions.

Hereafter we will try to give every paper copied from, credit for its verse, as in this issue.

Another thing is that some of the papers are not plainly marked so as to show the city and state they come from. If this would be taken into consideration and something done, it would save the exchange editor a great deal of labor; that is, looking through the advertisements for the city and state.

You never hear the bee complain,
Nor hear it weep nor wail;
But, if you wish, it can unfold
A very painful tail. —The Gleam.

The University School Record of Cleveland, Ohio, contains several interesting stories, which show the higher development of the brain in that direction.

The cover of the H. S. Argus from Harrisburg, Pa., is one of the prettiest we have seen this year.

We wish the Center, of Yates Center, Kansas, every success possible to a Kansas paper.

A HINT TO EXCHANGE EDITORS

If wisdom's ways you'd wisely seek,
Five things observe with care:
Of whom you speak, to whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.

The Optimist, of Kankakee, Ill., would need very little changing to make it a perfect paper.

It would be well worth the time spent to read "The Little Jew" in the Carroll Echo from Waukesha, Wis.

The Tocsin from Santa Clara, Cal., is one of the best books we have received.

The Student of Covington, Ky., keeps up well the reputation of Kentucky for writers.

When money talks,
What does it tell?
It only says
Hello!—Farewell!
—Houston Crimson.

The H. S. Sparks, of Sioux Falls, S. D., would be improved greatly by one or two good stories.

The high standard literary work of the Beacon, of Asbury Park, New Jersey, is shown by their writings and the choice of subjects from the noted works of Shakespeare.

RECIPE FOR A KISS

To one pint of dark piazza add a little moonlight. Sift lightly two ounces of love. Add a large measure of folly, stir in a floating ripple and one or two whispers, dissolve one half dozen glances in a well of silence. Beat in a small quantity of hesitation to two of yielding. Place the kisses on a flushed cheek and set away to cool on two red lips, and flavor with a slight scream.

—The Clintonian.

Mr. Bracelen (in Am. Hist.) — Most of you will remember the American revolution.

Freshy—What are sponsors good for any way?

Wise Soph—Why, to make the guidons of course.

June Brown is having a "Peck" of trouble about a sponsor.

Miss Rockfellow (after reading the Register)—And there isn't a word about me.

F. S.—I see that all your ears are turned toward me.

Grace Conant (at Senior Class meeting) — I move that ten-pins would be better.

Ben C. (at Class meetings)—If you have any friends in High Schools in any other country.

Go to papa, the maiden said;
The fellow knew that papa was dead,
He also knew the life he'd led
And so he tumbled when she said,
Go to papa.

Miss McHugh—Have you lived here all your life?

Guy S.—No, ma'am; not yet.

Miss Q.—Claude, how did you draw that line perpendicular to AB?

C. R. (at the board)—With a piece of chalk.

There are meters of accent
And meters of tone,
But the best of all meeters
Is to meet her alone.

Miss R.—Speak a little louder; I don't always sometimes hear.

Teacher—Is a bushel a variable quantity?
Pupil—Yes'm; usually.

Little drops of water
Freezing on the walk
Make the naughty adjectives
Mix in people's talk.

Miss McHugh—Duncan is having a happy time asleep.

L. Callahan—Yes; the happiest time he ever will have.

Miss Paxson—Please translate "Puella est malum."

D. Fetheram—The girl is wicked.

P. McC.—No; the girl is a peach.

Mrs. A.—What makes paper money good?

R. W.—It has bullion (bouillon) back of it Chorus—What?

Mrs. A.—He does not mean soup.

Cliff H.—I took a coop to the Senior hop.

TO BE IN LOVE

IS A PLEASANT sort of heart-sickness, but it has its responsibilities. The young sufferer must have especial regard for personal appearances. His CLOTHING, his LINEN, his NECKWEAR and his boots must all show the care of the scrupulously neat young man.

Clothing lasts a great deal longer for being well kept, too. It is necessary first only that it be properly made and fitted, for an ill-fitting suit, whatever the cost, can never add to a man's attractiveness.

CUT FLOWERS.

Flowers are no more a luxury than is education. They add to the sweetness and light of life—to the joy of living. They are an inspiration. A bunch of carnations on your desk will help you to write that essay. A few roses will help your sick classmate to recover. We always have fresh cut flowers on hand. Our store is but four blocks from the High School, or you can call us up by Phone 977.

INDIAN BASKETRY

Is the latest and most fascinating kind of fancy work. It offers the greatest opportunity to show your originality. The baskets are useful. They are also highly ornamental, ranking almost with Navajo blankets in this respect. Their rich colors make them desirable additions to the decorations of den and room. The materials are inexpensive. We sell everything that is used in the art.

Professor (discussing organic and inorganic kingdoms)—Now, if I should shut my eyes—so—and drop my head—so—and remain perfectly still, you would say I was a clod. But I move, I leap, then what do you call me?

Voice from rear—A clodhopper.—Ex.

Murray French goes without an overcoat on drill days because he wants to show the lyre (liar) under his chevrons.

Morris W. (in Hist. class)—I don't believe that Congress put down that resurrection.

Mary had a little lamb,
He was her steady beau,
And everywhere that Mary went,
Harry supplied the dough.

He is Scotch-Irish, isn't he?
Oh, no! The one I mean is a senior.

Every Young Man of Twenty

Should take out a twenty payment Life policy or some other form of life insurance in the

BANKERS RESERVE LIFE COMPANY

B. H. Robison, President

BECAUSE—The annual cost can never be less and the accumulating dividends can begin no earlier.

BECAUSE—There is no other form of investment so certain, so satisfactory and so immediately available to meet emergencies.

BECAUSE—Every young man of twenty owes it to society to protect his estate against the bankruptcy so frequently incident to death.

BECAUSE—Every young man of twenty in the Omaha High School should be loyal to Omaha and give his life insurance to the Only Omaha Life Company.

Miss Brown (at fire drill)—Why don't you get out of here.

Bryson—I would rather burn to death than freeze to death.

Mrs. A.—Compare Paris in France to Florence in Nebraska.

A. F.—Well, there are several thousand people in Florence.

Mosher Shorthand

This system is becoming rapidly popular. It has been introduced into a number of prominent schools, the most important of which are located in Milwaukee, Chicago, Austin, Tex., and San Francisco, Cal. It is conceded to be a vast improvement on the Gregg system, because of its superior legibility and speed. It is much easier to master than Pitman, Graham or Munson. Those systems are extremely difficult to learn because of the many positions, many slants, many shades, many rules, exceptions to rules and many word signs. Mosher shorthand is extremely simple. It would pay any one contemplating a course in shorthand to secure this text. It is the finest thing ever published upon shorthand. Send for particulars. Write

College Base-Ball Team

At the close of the most successful year of foot-ball the Omaha Commercial College has ever had, there was organized a strong base-ball team, which will be put into active service as soon as the season opens. Mr. Gallentine, one of the best amateur players in the state, has been elected captain, and the team is thoroughly organized. There were more than forty applicants for positions on the team. A second team will also be organized, for practice purposes and to play certain games which the first team will not be able to play. The base-ball aggregation gotten together promises much. The manager, Mr. J. A. Savage, is now ready to complete a schedule for the season. Any communications addressed to him in care of the Omaha Commercial College, 17th and Douglas Streets, will receive prompt attention.

Unprecedented Enrollment

The quarters now occupied by the Omaha Commercial College are severely taxed. There is scarcely a vacant seat to be had in the building. The enrollment is the largest in its history. The finest body of young men and women to be found are hard at work in the various departments. Additional teachers have been employed and the work being done could not be excelled. Every college interest is being properly taken care of. There are many interesting features to be observed during the Winter Term, among which are a Lecture Course, Literary Society, Public Entertainments, Athletic Contests, Board of Trade Meetings, College Band and Orchestra, etc. These things contribute to the pleasure and profit of those who attend. Verily, the popularity and prestige of the Omaha Commercial College are established beyond a quibble. The second and third floors at 17th and Douglas Streets will be the busiest place in Omaha for the next three months. It would pay you to peep into the quarters of this school. It is a bee hive of industry, from morning until night.

Advertising literature of various kinds may be obtained by writing to Rohrbough Bros, proprietors of the school.

WHAT A DISAPPOINTMENT!

For the sake of recreation
Once I asked an explanation
From a young man (no relation)
What was meant by osculation
While I shifted my location
To invite the sweet sensation.
Well, imagine my vexation
When he gave me the translation
And its Latin derivation
And a lot of information
Like a pedagogue's oration
Till I thought I'd have a fit.
Wasn't he an awful fit.
