Why not wear clothes with that touch of exclusiveness and individuality—clothes that lend style and grace?

You deserve to be as well dressed as any student. Dollar for dollar you spend as much money, but you don't buy 100 per cent strong. You get a suit, that's true, but it lacks a few points in style, a few in workmanship, a few in material, and a few in fit—so taking it altogether you get about a two-third value.

This spring buy your clothes at this store, where every garment is 100 per cent good, where assortments are the best, salesmen the most attentive, satisfaction promised and promises fulfilled.

Just Cousins.

Ned Payne rose Friday morning with a determination to win in everything he had entered in the Track meet, between Sydney Prep and Pemberton. Dear old Pemberton must win! Their old time rivals had crowed over them once but they should not be allowed to do so again.

He remained in bed about a half hour after waking, thinking of the things he meant to do that day. In this pleasant occupation he dozed off again and in his dream of fancy he saw himself the hero of the day; crowned with honors, and he also thought he saw the shy, timid look and the praises he would receive from Beatrice, the only fair co-ed in the whole school whom he thought worth noticing. But all things have an end and the second gong made an untimely awakening for Ned's pleasant dreams.

His troubles for the day began with his dressing. He couldn't find his cuff buttons; his collar button, the only one he had, hid itself in the farthest corner, under the dresser, in spite of his warm invitation for it to show itself; his "very nicest" tie was spotted with the perfume Beatrice had spilt on it the night before; and to further add to his misery he could find only one clean shirt, and only two buttons adorned it, one at the top and the other at the bottom. It would not have mattered quite so much if his room mate had not promised to bring his cousin up to the meet.

But finally he was dressed even if his cuff buttons didn't match and his tie did speak rather loudly of La'Zell's best perfumes.

As he went down the stairs his only pet, a small and exceedingly friendly King Charles dog, came up to meet him. Probably they were both to blame but at any event the next moment there was a mixture of a boy, a dog, a series of short painful yelps and a choice collection of warm college phraseology.

"Well if that isn't the straw that breaks the camel's back! You miserable little cur," broke forth Ned as he discovered a neat little rent in the knee of his trousers.

By this time it is very easy to see how it was that he just missed his car out to the Park where the Meet was to be held. And also how grateful he was when he saw his roommate's neat little runabout gliding up to the curb.

"Why hello Dick. Can't you give a fellow a lift? I can't stop to explain the details now, but come, do take me out to the park. Well what if the car is full? I'll sit up here in the front," begged Ned.

Scarcely waiting for Harry's answer, he climbed into the car and in fifteen minutes was at the park, ready for the first event scheduled.

Of course Pemberton won nearly all the events and Ned was the hero of the hour. But after a desperate effort Harry succeeded in leading him back to where his car was waiting. There he met Betty Marlowe and her roommate, Peggy Lane. Peggy had been brought for a two-fold reason, the first of which was to prevent Betty's trip from being a lonely one and also because Dick had begged her to bring Peggy.

But when the introductions were made, Dick purposely omitted the fact that Betty was his cousin. This was done to pay off an old score with Ned.

Everything went so well and all were so well pleased with each other and themselves that when they reached the college campus Ned called Dick aside and began to stammer and beat around the bush but finally managed to make Dick understand that Betty was the only girl he could look after for that evening and wouldn't Dick please postpone his cousin's visit to the college?

"No, I'm afraid I can't help you, because my cousin has sort of planned on coming up here for quite a while and it wouldn't be quite the fair thing to back out now", answered Harry with as serious a face as he could command.

"Well then, I suppose if you can't why you can't," Ned growled as he stuck one hand in the innermost recesses of his pocket while his other hand went like a mower through his crop of curly black hair.

"But say—wait a minute. I'll tell you what I will do. Why can't you come down to the depot to meet my cousin? We can run down there while the girls are primping for this evening and then we can all come back here and plan something for tonight," suggested Dick when he saw how absolutely miserable his companion's face had become.

"Yes, I'll meet you at the depot at 6:00 sharp," answered Ned.

When the train pulled in that evening Dick insisted that Ned wait for him in the depot while he went to meet his cousin.

The look on Ned's face was therefore indescribable when Dick returned, leading Betty by the arm.

"Mr. Payne, my cousin Miss Marlowe—why Ned what's the matter," exclaimed Dick for his roommate was looking at them as if he were looking at the ghost of some long departed ancestor.

"Your cousin! why how is that; there must be some mistake; she never told me anything about being your cousin," Ned burst forth unable to endure the suspense of the thing any longer. "how did she get down here? We left both of the girls up to the college."

"Umph! maybe you did. We came down in the machine after we saw you leave and after we got down here Betty kept in the back-ground until the train came and then we came in here where you were. I guess that's about all we did isn't it Betty."

"Yes except that you forgot to tell him Peggy came with us and I suppose she is still in hiding. You seem to have forgotten all about her," answered Betty demurely as she perched on a near-by truck.

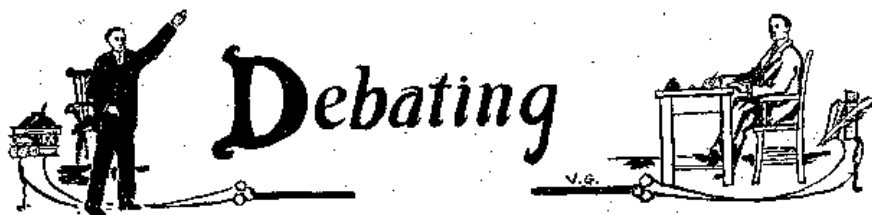

The place to see them—319 South 16th Street.

"No I haven't. I'm going after her this minute if Ned will look after you," answered Betty's impertinent cousin as he started off on a run.

"Say," whispered Ned while he adjusted Betty's scarf which insisted upon slipping off, "cousins aren't such bad things after all, when they are some one else's."

And Betty heartily agreed with him.

H. C. '12.

Debating is at its zenith. Although Superintendent Graff does not permit us girls to be members of the teams to represent the Purple and White, we can appreciate a debate as much as a football game; more so, because "talking back," like boys do in a debate, is much more in the girls' line than tumbling all over each other, like the boys do in football. (If I were a boy I would take a girl to every debate of the season, for a girl likes debates so much.)

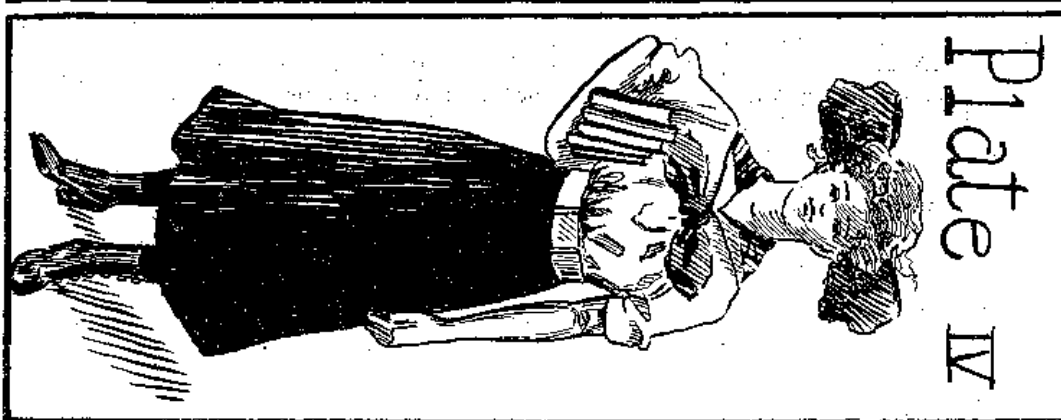

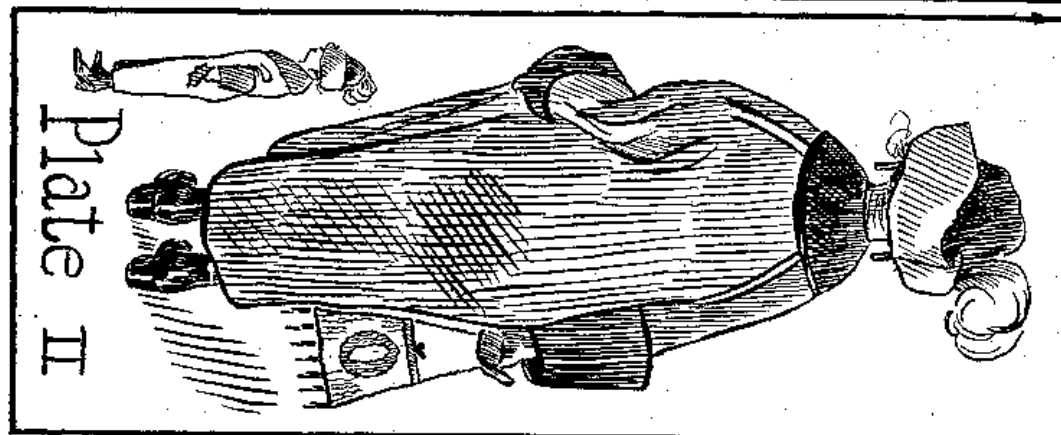

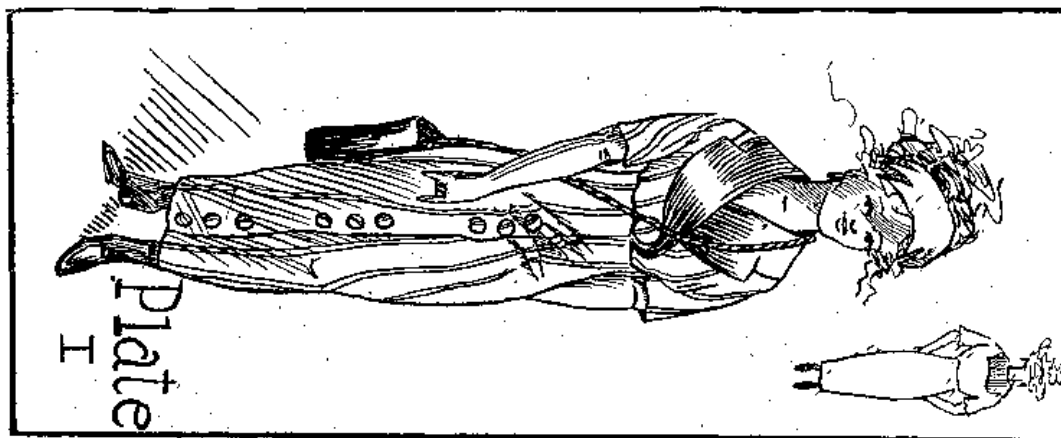

Arrangements for the Council Bluffs and West Des Moines debates are practically complete. The question for both these debates is, "Resolved, that the present immigration laws should be so amended as to exclude all persons over sixteen years of age unable to read and write, provided, that none dependent on qualified immigrants, residents or citizens of the United States, be excluded." On March 22 our team, composed of George Grimes, captain; Maurice Clark and Barney Kulakofsky, went to Council Bluffs to uphold the negative of this question.

On April 12 we debate West Des Moines High at Des Moines. The Omaha team, Edwin Landale, captain, Fred Rypins and Carson Hathaway, is expecting a hard fight, for whatever West Des Moines High School does they do in earnest, with a grim determination to win, which we realize, much to our sorrow, from last season's football game. Our team debates the affirmative of the above question against Des Moines.

The debating manager has been chosen. His duties are somewhat numerous and sundry, but one of the most important of them is the collection of tickets at the door. The Board of Control gave particular attention to doorkeeping qualifications in choosing this important personage and this year, in spite of the probable shortage of tickets, there will be no deadhead rushes, for our debating manager, Joe Woolery, will only have to place his magnificent frame in the doorway to stop the colossal mob which is sure to throng about the entrance. One thing is certain; we have a fine big manager.

We will probably debate Lincoln during the latter part of April.

Walk-Over Shoes are the shoes of satisfaction.

EDITORIAL

The Fusser.

In searching for an editorial in the Girls' Number, the Editress racked her brain for months to no avail. She tore her hair, dislocated puffs, and disarranged switches, yet no idea came. She looked down the hall, here she saw a boy talking to a girl, there the same thing, and the idea arrived. Write about that necessary adjunct of school life, the sometimes entertaining, the sometimes boring, the always present—fusser!

We approach the subject timidly. Not because we don't know anything about it, (of course not, we have been fussed many times), but we feel that a subject so important, presenting so many phases, cannot be very ably dealt with by ourself. However, let us now consider the fusser.

The fusser may be divided into two types; he who fusses many, and he who fusses one. Each type has his advantages, both for the fusser himself, and for the fussee. Of the two the first type does perhaps the most harm. He is uncertain. One day you think you have landed him, only to find out that the next day he has fussed some one else. He will take A to the dance, B to the theater, call on C Sunday night, and walk home from school with D. He is continually getting someone into a pickle, and keeps everyone in a stew trying to figure out whom he really likes. He frequently "butts in." The excuse for his existence is this: By fussing many, many go to places where they otherwise couldn't get to go. This justifies the fusser of many.

Then we have the fusser of the second type, he who fusses one. What noble qualities he presents:

Constancy, Firmness, Unswerving Loyalty. He may be seen at her locker in the morning, walking in the halls with her between classes, taking her home at noon, to the matinee every week, to every hop and calling every Sunday. He is always sure of whom he will take, and she is always sure of going. He causes much less trouble than the fusser of the first type and finds his justification in the fact that his example warns others of what not to do.

To conclude: Co-education is necessary, so we must suffer the fusser.

Proper Recognition for Debaters.

One of the fairest, squarest things that has been done in this school for many moons was the action of the Athletic Board, which also controls debating, in deciding to award "O's" to members of the high school debating teams. Why it should have been true that the various forms of athletics were encouraged, and little or no attention paid to debating, is almost inexplicable. One of the principle reasons for the loss of interest in debating has been this fact that the debaters have received no encouragement for their efforts, either from faculty or students.

Debating is no doubt far less spectacular than athletic contests. But the reputation and standing of a school is as much or even more dependent upon its victories in the debating field as it is upon its victories on the gridiron. Then too, the debater sacrifices as much if not more than the football players.

To go to school half the day, study political economy text-books all afternoon, and then study lessons all evening, week in and week out for months at a stretch, is both a great physical and mental strain. The average person who attends a debate does not know the time and effort necessary to thorough preparation, and cannot appreciate it. Thus the more credit is due to the boys in the past who have worked, unappreciated, for their school.

By the action of the board, debating has been placed upon an equal footing with football, basketball, and track; in other words, has been placed where it has properly always belonged. It should receive no more recognition than any of these sports, but it certainly should receive as much.

We predict that this action will have many far-reaching results. The interest of the student body will be aroused to a greater pitch. More will be encouraged to enter the debating arena, and better teams may then be obtained. More victories will come to Omaha High School.

It is altogether right and just.

There was an article in the daily papers of Aberdeen, South Dakota, not long ago, which said that an unknown man had been found who was apparently frozen to death. He wore the pin of a prominent lodge, but beyond this there were no possible means of identification, so the lodge consented to bury him. It was during the unbearable cold spell, when it was about 43° below most of the time at Aberdeen. Preparations had all been made for the usual method of burial, but were upset by the announcement of the grave-digger that the ground was frozen so solid that it was simply impossible to make the grave, and that the body would have to be cremated. This presented new difficulties, as Aberdeen does not possess a crematory, so it was necessary to resort to the kilns of the Northern Pacific shops. At the end of twenty-four hours, when they went to see if everything was all right, their surprise and horror can scarcely be imagined, for, as they opened the door of the kiln, a voice from within was heard to say, "For heaven's sake shut that door! It's the first time I've been warm since I struck Aberdeen."—Ex.

DEAREST RUTH:

For months and months you have been writing to me, and telling me all the social news. Now it is my turn, and I will try to describe some of the good times we had in the past month or so.

Of course the greatest event of all was the C. O. C. Hop, given at Chambers' on February 16. For months ahead we had been looking forward to it and when it finally did come and go, no one was disappointed. The hall was decorated by the battalions and companies, in a myriad of colors. Two of the boys' clubs, Les Hiboux and Amatoff, had the cosy corners, Les Hiboux decorating their's with club colors, gray and black, and the national colors; and the Amatoff decorating in red, with Oriental hangings.

The grand march was led by Captain Rex Houlton and Miss Katherine Gould, and was very pretty, only the officers, (in full dress uniform), and their ladies taking part. The Officers' dance, in which the girls wore the swords, was also very pretty. No need to tell you everyone had a glorious time.

On February 10, Dorothy Weller entertained at a delightful luncheon at the Clarinda.

Ruth Anderson and Claire Patterson entertained about thirty girls the day after the C. O. C. The girls played hearts, a game in which all took a keen interest, and enjoyed a dandy luncheon. We can do without boys once in a while!

The A. X. X. club of girls has been very active the past month. On February 17, Emma Ring entertained at an afternoon card party, followed by a luncheon; and on the thirteenth Lissetta Smith entertained, hearts being played. Cordula Haverly also entertained the club at an evening party.

On February 29, the alumni members of Les Hiboux entertained the active members at an informal hop in Dundee. Eighteen couples had a fine time in the cosy little hall. About a week later, on March 9, the active Les Hiboux and a few of their friends had another dandy dancing party at the same place. Informal dances are always so much fun, where everybody knows everybody else.

Los Loros Club, which was quite active last year, has reorganized with six girls as members. They are planning a number of afternoon parties, kensingtons, etc.

This is about all the news, Betty dear. In a few days the Alumni Hop will be given at Chambers'. Many alumni now at the University are expected to be home for the hop. Lovingly,

BETTY.

SENIOR CLASS MEETINGS.

The almost moribund Class of 1912, has been stirring quite a bit in the last few weeks, and is planning lots of trouble, both for themselves and other people. The meetings, while being well attended, have for the most part been devoid of interest, as very little discussion took place. It has been decided however to hold a Senior play, to be given at the Brandeis under the direction of Miss Fitch. The play committee consist of Rex Houlton, chairman; Ulah Renner, Laura Zimmerman, Will Noble, Maurice Clark. Of course the question of the hour is: "Who will be leading lady?" It is worthy of comment that as far as appearances go, Edwin and Grace seem to be the long and short of it, on the platform.

BASKETBALL TEAM WELCOMED.

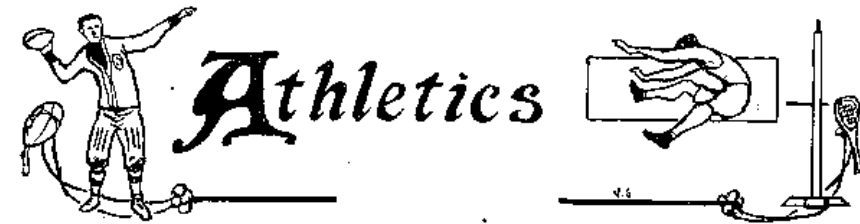

When "our boys" returned from Lincoln with the cup that proved them to be basketball champions of Nebraska, they were met at the station by about twenty-five of the students. These were all boys, and everyone else must have gone to church or Sunday school. Although it was Sunday, the team were welcomed with some rousing yells. Miss McHugh, Mr. Reed, and Miss McDonald, of the faculty were also there to greet the conquering heroes.

MASS MEETING.

One of our too few and far between mass meetings was held March 1, for the Lincoln basketball game. The band played both of its pieces in honor of the occasion, and made such a hit that it went to the game the next night and played them both over again. Mr. Reed spoke, as did also Coach Clarke, and Will Noble, manager, explained how far we had gone into the hole. The team were on the platform, we had some pretty fair yelling, and on the whole the meeting was successful. At any rate, a good crowd turned out for the game, and our boys neatly trimmed Lincoln, to the tune of 30 to 23.

By the way—have you noticed how short the suits are which the basketball team are wearing this year? Is it because the athletic fund is low?

Walk-Over Shoes are considered the leaders of the world.

Basket Ball.

OMAHA, 25; LINCOLN, 21.

Omaha won a fast and exciting game from Lincoln High in Lincoln on the evening of February 10.

Omaha led at the close of the first half by the score of 13 to 12. Lincoln came back strong, however, in the second half and with only four minutes to play the score was 19 to 18 in favor of Omaha.

Burkenroad then electrified the crowd with several difficult goals.

Metheny of Lincoln was forced to leave the game on account of a sprained ankle. His team mate and captain, Channing Mann, and Mark Hughes of the Omaha five seemed to have it in for each other. They both had a class B foul called on them.

Burkenroad starred for Omaha, while Mann showed up best for Lincoln.

OMAHA, 14; CREIGHTON, 12.

OMAHA, 12; CREIGHTON, 17.

Omaha High School lost and won a game from Creighton on the evening of February 17 at the Omaha University.

Handicapped by the loss of Mark Hughes, center, and Sidney Meyer, forward, on account of injuries, the team showed excellent form. The play was rough at all times, mostly on the part of Creighton. It is the opinion of all present that Referee Curtis must have been asleep or was wearing a pair of smoked glasses, because he made no attempt to call fouls.

OMAHA, 18; SIOUX CITY, 23.

Sioux City High defeated Omaha High on the evening of February 23 by the score of 23 to 18. This was the hardest fought game ever witnessed in Sioux City.

Omaha started the game with a spurt, but by consistent playing Sioux City forged ahead and finished the first half 13 to 7 in their favor.

Whirlwind plays and lucky goals in the second half gave the victory to Sioux City.

Burkenroad played the stellar game for Omaha, while Holmes and Aldrich did the best for Sioux City.

OMAHA, 30; LINCOLN, 23.

Omaha defeated Lincoln for the second time this year. The game was played on the local Y. M. C. A. floor and was attended by the largest crowd of the season.

You'll not wear a weary look in Walk-Overs.

Omaha started out with a rush and it was clear throughout that the purple and white had the stronger team. However, there was no time when Omaha had a large enough margin to feel safe and sure of a victory. Throughout the entire struggle it was nip and tuck for Omaha to keep ahead. The first half ended 15 to 12 in favor of Omaha.

Omaha put up a stronger game in the second half than in the first and Lincoln showed up better also in this half. At one time during the last half Lincoln took a spurt and came within one point of tying the score.

It is difficult to pick out any particular "stars" on either side, but Burkenroad probably showed up the best for Omaha, with Hughes a close second. Mann and Metheny starred for Lincoln. Everybody was glad to see Virgil Rector back and his presence greatly strengthened the Omaha team.

OMAHA, 38; SOUTH OMAHA, 27.

In a close and gruelling contest Omaha repeated her victory over South Omaha at the Y. M. C. A. on March 16. The game was well attended by students from both schools and there was much rivalry in rooting. Omaha clearly was the better team, however, and carried away the victory. All of the Omaha team did fine work, Crocker, Burkenroad and Hughes, with Gardner as a star guard, and Rector playing a fine center, gave a marvelous exhibition of team work and brilliant individual playing.

NEBRASKA STATE BASKET BALL TOURNAMENT. OMAHA HIGH STATE CHAMPS.

Omaha High established its superiority in basket ball over twenty-six representative high schools from all over Nebraska in the state tournament held at Lincoln March 7, 8, 9.

First game:

OMAHA, 51; STATE FARM, 11.

Omaha started off well in the tournament by defeating the State Farm by the decisive score of 51 to 11.

The Omaha team showed up in excellent form in the opening contest. The team work was perfect and the different players put the ball in the basket from any place on the floor. Burkenroad and Rector rolled up the most points.

Second game:

OMAHA, 30; GENEVA, 28.

Omaha had the biggest scare of its basketball career in the second game of the tournament, which was played with Geneva.

The first half was a wonderful exhibition of interscholastic basket ball and ended 22 to 10 in favor of Omaha. In the second half Omaha, thinking they had the game cinched, did not work, and as a result Geneva was able to pile up almost enough points to win.

Walk-Overs are chock full of style.

It was through the sensational work of Burkenroad of Omaha that Omaha came out ahead. He scored 26 of Omaha's 30 points. All the scoring in the last half was done by him and his baskets at the critical moments strengthened the team and made them fight to win.

Third game:

OMAHA, 25; UNIVERSITY PLACE, 5.

University Place was no match for the Omaha five in the third game. Although University Place played desperately, Omaha took the lead and through excellent team work and goal throwing kept a good lead throughout the contest. University Place was unable to secure a field goal. This was due to the fast team work of Omaha and the great guarding of Burkenroad and Gardner.

Burkenroad, Rector and Gardner starred for Omaha, while Vifquain and Allen played the best for University Place.

Finals—Championship:

OMAHA, 29; SOUTH OMAHA, 8.

In this contest Omaha established its superiority over South Omaha, thus winning the state championship. The game was played before a large crowd, among which were a great number from Omaha and South Omaha.

Omaha started the game with a rush and a determination to win such as they had not showed in previous games. South Omaha fought well, but were outclassed and outplayed by their superior opponents. Omaha's goals were the result of good team work and accurate goal throwing.

In the second half Omaha was even better than in the first half and placed the ball in the basket from all angles. At the close of the game our team was presented with a beautiful silver cup and six individual silver medals. Those receiving medals were: Beryl Crocker, captain and left forward; Mark Hughes, right forward; Virgil Rector, center; James Gardner, right guard; Leslie Burkenroad, left guard; Sidney Meyer, forward.

HE REMEMBERED.

A Jew and his Gentile friend had had many long discussions about religion, but all to no avail—they each remained faithful to their own teachings. As Easter drew near, the Gentile suggested to his friend, that he should decorate his store in honor of the day. The Jew consented to do this; so the day before Easter the Gentile walked past his friend's store to see if their agreement had been remembered. In the window stood one single Easter lily, with the following sign tied to it:

"Christ is risen, but our prices remain the same."—Ex.

"Have you purchased your 1913 class emblems? Shook Mfg. Co."

You'll not experience that tired feeling in Walk-Over.

ONE OF THE BIG ADVANTAGES A BOYLES COLLEGE TRAINED STENOGRAPHER OR BOOKKEEPER ALWAYS HAS

Every Boyles College Graduate Stenographer and Bookkeeper has the prestige of the thousands of successful Boyles College graduates behind him or her the minute he or she graduates—and coupled to that he or she has behind him or her all the power of the unique Boyles College Situation Finding Department.

The alumni of Boyles College is most loyal—and they are, in a big majority of instances, located where they can help both Boyles College and Boyles College graduates. Walk into any big local business office here in Omaha and you'll find scores of the Boyles College alumni occupying positions as Heads of Departments, Office Managers, etc., etc.—all of them having considerable authority in regard to hiring new business assistants. Secretaries of world-wide organizations—men possessing some of the best positions in the Omaha business world—came from Boyles College, and it's only natural that they should like to hire Boyles College graduates. Their own success was helped by Boyles training. They know that Boyles College does produce most excellent and most carefully trained Stenographers and Bookkeepers—the kind that make splendid Private Secretaries. They'll prefer Boyles College graduates every time!

Think what a great help this is to every Boyles College graduate! Think what an advantage it is! It is something that no one not a Boyles trained person can share in.

The usual business college and school allows their graduates to shift

Domestic Science

During the past month the Domestic Science department has been running full blast. We girls have learned to plan a course (coarse) dinner without all the fuss and fume usually attending such a momentous occasion. A most amusing incident happened a week or so ago in my domestic science class. We were learning to make soups and among the various kinds of soup assigned to different pupils to make it fell to my lot to make bean soup—But I can go no further as I recall the sight of those little pink wormy-looking things in that soup. I actually thought they were worms. Ugh!

We inland people have very little knowledge of shore food but having once been to the shore myself and partaking of all those salt-water night-mares over which coast people rave I thought I was thoroughly versed in the mysteries of clam chowder and lobster. So the other day when we were told that we would, that day, learn to prepare lobster I was overjoyed. Now, I thought, I will show my superiority over these other narrow people, by reason of my vastly wider outlook. (You see I've been to Boston which is on the Atlantic ocean.) As the instructor passed out to each pupil her lobster, with a smile of victory I handed mine back. "Haven't you any riper ones," I asked "for these are green as grass while those I ate in Boston were red-ripe."

I wish the people that made the English language had used a little bit of common sense in naming things and I'm sure Ruth Clarke does too. The other day Ruth, always eager to not only keep up but to be ahead of her class, having learned on the previous day that the class would prepare string beans on the succeeding day, hurried down to the domestic science rooms. Now, she thought, I will get some of my lesson for tomorrow. She was busily engaged stringing those beans on a piece of twine when the teacher came in. Ruth now knows that names have no significance whatever.

About five or six weeks ago (all you girls remember) we had that lesson on soda biscuits. One of the girls in the Senior class dropped one. The result was confusion. I will simply suggest that it was somewhere near this time when the big derrick on the new building came crashing to the ground.

Helen Pogue never learns anything at school without applying it if possible to her home. The other day while her mother was not at home and Helen was chief cook, a tramp appeared at the door and asked for a little food. Helen immediately remembered some biscuits she had made, having learned the receipt at school. These she gave the tramp. In five minutes he returned and asked for the ax. She told him where it was. He then asked for the wood pile and Helen, over-joyed to think her kindness had brought its own reward, walked clear across the lot to show him where it was. He then informed her that he just wanted the ax to break the biscuits with.

A fit for every foot at the Walk-Over Boot Shop.

Although I have not taken any particular instances (?) for narration but have rather held myself to a detailed description of the work(?) as taken in logical order(?) from September till now I feel confident that I (who have been to Boston) have given an insight into the mysteries of our culinary department.

REGIMENT

Since the beginning of this dullest of all years the cadets have drilled six times, thirty-nine whole minutes each time; the officers have met for discussions about ten times and the other drill days all of the boys have spent with their fifth hour teachers and that neglected portion of the student body, namely, the girls. I was going to say "us girls," but decided it was too familiar and unmilitary. But why try to write a soldierly article about a regiment whose one and only military achievement is nothing more than wearing a uniform? Of course, we like to have the boys in our fifth hour classes to lessen the monotony and take time from recitations, but if they are going to prepare for camp and "compet" it seems to me it is about time for them to get started. Unfortunately, only the boys go to camp, except on visitors' day, and then only part of the girls go, while the rest stay home and study, or rest, or think what a good time they might be having. Well, after all, studying is about all that's left in school for us—no drill, no camp, no athletics, no societies, and now some of the boys say there will be no sponsors!

It may seem rather bold and out of place for one so uninformed to criticize, but nevertheless to me it is absurd and a shame that the Senior officers of our, better say the boys' regiment, should spend five to six hours of their valuable (?) time discussing whether or not they will exclude the girls from the one ceremony that they can partake in and really be somebody. It is almost selfish of them, but I don't care. I wouldn't be a sponsor. No, not if Deyo or even Mac should ask me! But I'll have to admit it's a pretty custom just the same.

You know as much about the regiment now as I do, and that is precious little. I'm awfully interested, though, and want to see the boys have a dandy time at camp and a good "compet" when they get back home.

An exceptional opportunity; no high school boy will be without some outside source of income. The Central Implement Co. of Omaha offers High School Boys an opportunity to sell on a commission basis, their Electric Fireless Cooker. This is an exceptional offer in that the exclusive agency in Omaha for this widely advertised product is held by this firm. There are several other advantages of this offer. No. 275 Fully Equipped, $45.00

COOK WITH ELECTRICITY

No Flame Fires, no Smoke, Soot or Odors. Clean, certain and uniform results. Cooks by the Clock Regulator.

WHAT IT COSTS.

The price paid is soon forgotten; users remember the wholesome flavor of foods. The tough cuts of meat made tender, the work made easier and more pleasant. They appreciate the saving in fuel, the absence of Flame Fires, smoke and odors. Foods are not scorched or burned in Detroit Fireless Electrics.

SAVES ITS COST.

NO. 275, FULLY EQUIPPED, $45.00.

This stove brings together in a convenient form the necessary principles for cooking economically with electricity. It is essentially a Fireless Cooker. The cooking compartments are insulated with heavy windings of corrugated asbestos paper, the "Aero Cell Way," and heat may be retained to cook the food long after the electric current has been disconnected.

The covers, which close in a V-shaped groove running around the upper edge, make a water seal, which retains heat, steam and odors effectively. All the metal parts are made with special dies which produce excellence of finish and efficient service.

The cases are Wellsville Planished Steel, the same as any steel range, and will not warp or split from the effects of steam or water or overheating.

The cooking compartments are made of heavy aluminum metal, the bottoms being of cast iron, below which is located the Electric Heating Element, with all wires and connections. (These parts cannot be affected by steam or water in a Detroit Electric, as they remain perfectly dry and are not affected by expansion or contraction).

A full equipment of Ever Ware aluminum kettles is furnished with each stove especially designed to meet the requirements of ordinary family use.

The end shelf has an electrically heated hot plate which is used for toasting and frying foods. This disk section, 8 inches in diameter and weighing 7 pounds, can be removed when hot by simply lifting with the hook to one of the cooking compartments or ovens, where it retains the heat for browning or otherwise cooking foods. This radiator is heated from the interior outward and no loss of heat by radiation or deflection occurs.

The heating elements for each oven is operated by simply turning a switch, and one or both ovens may be placed in operation at one time.

The Detroit Fireless Electric is about the height of other stoves, being 12 inches wide and 35 inches long; it has nickel trimmings and ornamental appearance in keeping with its excellence and efficiency.

Each stove is equipped with an automatic clock regulator for shutting off the current at exactly the right time. As stated above, electric current is used to start the cooking in Detroit Fireless Ovens; from 20 to 30 minutes is sufficient; the clock shuts off the current and the imprisoned heat cooks the food.

It is the acme of cleanliness. Electricity gives the same uniform heat; there is no smoke or soot, no flame fire, consequently no danger of accident or explosion. The heat generated is confined in and around the food; a few minutes' current starts the cooking process, imprisoned heat cooks it.

It saves time. The user leaves it to do the work of hours in perfect safety. This item alone repays its cost.

It saves nutriment. Foods cooked the fireless way are more palatable.

It saves fuel. Electricity used in a Detroit Electric Fireless Stove is the cheapest fuel known for cooking purposes.

It is the Modern Cooking Marvel and makes the kitchen ideal.

WHAT! LATIN OF VALUE?

That the study of Latin develops the power of concentration and trains in correct habits of thinking has long been the claim of Latin teachers. If the claim is well founded the result of this training ought to be appreciable in the later years of the High School course.

Just how much the time spent in the study of Latin has contributed to the efficiency of the present Senior class as shown in the grade of scholarship attained would be difficult to determine, but some statistics in this connection are suggestive.

The list of those eligible to compete for the commencement program has recently been published. This includes all pupils who had five A's and no mark below B in English in their Junior and Senior years:

Number of pupils in the class of 1912	280
Number of pupils in Senior Latin classes	56
Number of pupils eligible for program	58
Number eligible who have had four years Latin	32
Number eligible who have had three years Latin	8
