Wire Forms Help

DARALLELEPIPEDS, prismatoids, and truncated prisms! These are the worries of the Geometry III students in Miss Maybel Burns' and Miss Grace Faw-throp's classes Willis Taylor '34 has courageously undertaken the job of making models of these figures out of slender pieces of wire soldered together. A few of the more complicated ones are the figure proving the volume of a prismatoid and the one showing that the volume of a parallelepiped is the same as that of a cube of the same dimensions. (Now you know.)

The latter is called, by those well acquainted with it, the Devil's Rattrap or the Devil's Coffin. Others are a truncated prism and a pyramid with a plane passed through it parallel to the base. These models are a great help in proving theorems since they aid students to visualize the figure being proved.

Central on Fire---Only a Smoulder!

THE FIREMEN were happy! They had just put out the cat for the night and had settled down for a quiet game of chess or a little snooze when the alarm came that Central High school was blazing. "Not good old Central High school!" they cried, struggling into their coats and helmets.

But no, it was not a blaze. In fact, it was a mere smoulder. A passerby at 1 o'clock, Wednesday morning, noticed smoke coming from the west side of the building and sent in the alarm. A small fire caused by defective wiring in the elevator was quickly extinguished before any damage was caused.

Even Miss Towne regrets that the fire did not happen during school so the students could have a thrill. Just to show their speed, during the fire drill the very day before, the students emptied the building quickly. The south side took two minutes five seconds: the east side, two minutes twentysix seconds; and the west side, two minutes thirty seconds.

NEW DEAL, NEW BOOKS

IN THESE DAYS of urgent problems, new theories, and great progress, the world needs more than ever new information on the vital topics of the day. This information cannot be found in older sources, but must be received through the latest periodicals and books. The library is adding to its collection as quickly as possible the most up-to-date volumes on the most talked-of topics. Following is a list of the new books purchased to aid students and teachers in keeping up on current problems.

A general account of modern times is Shaw's "Trends of Civilization and Culture," 901 Sh 2. A book which has been greatly praised is Stuart Chase's "New Deal," 330 C 38n. The Russian situation is dealt with in "Stalin," 947.08 L 59s, by Levine. Two new books on technocracy are Arkright's "A B C of Technocracy," 330.1 Ar 4, and "Toward Technocracy," 330.1 L 14, by "Sinclair Lewis," 813.092 L 58v, is a new biography by Van Doren. Emerson's "Alcohol and Man," 612.8 Em 3, deals with prohibition. Others of interest are "New Crisis in the East," 951 H 53, by High, and "War Debts and World Prosperity," 336.3 M 86, by Moulton. "Franklin D. Roosevelt," G R 67 L, by Lindley, is a timely book, as is "Looking Forward," by Franklin D. Roosevelt, himself. The latter book is not yet in the library, but will be there soon. "100,000,000 Guinea Pigs," by Schlink, is a fascinating account of the deceptions and snares in modern advertising and selling.

All of these books are in the general collection. If they are not on the shelves, a reserve slip turned in will bring them to you in a few

O-BOOK GOES OVER

WITH MORE RELUCTANCE than usual, with more hard work in view than usual, the O-Book was started this year. But the work has been simpler than ever. Of course, the plan for this year's annual was essentially simple, but the cooperation afforded by the various departments and a majority of pupils is a remarkable tribute to the school spirit and enthusiasm at Central. All money guarantees and purchases have been entirely voluntary; no student or organization has been forced to support the annual. The money for club pictures has been turned in promptly. The seniors have had their pictures taken more quickly and with less agitation on the part of sponsors than is usually the case. Enough money has been pledged for cuts to make the continued work practical.

The work is not over yet. Only the first stages are behind us. Splendid support has been rendered so far; it must be continued if the 1933 O-Book is to be a success.

STUDY OR SPORT?

SOME PEOPLE have the idea that when they enter high school, all forms of sports must stop since much time must be spent on studying. In a way they are correct. To make passing grades, one must study, but there is no need for giving up all sports.

To keep in the best of health, one must exercise. One of the most popular ways of exercising is to go in for some form of sports. Here at Central, you can enjoy your favorite sport or sports as the case may be.

A baseball league has just been started, a horseshoe tournament is well under way, and ping-pong and golf tournaments have just been finished. In all probability, there will be a tennis contest. Maybe you get more fun out of auto riding, or the like. That is all right, but it does not give the exercise needed for the body. Opportunity is knocking at your door. Take advantage of it.

T'S BEEN 'most two weeks since Th' Notes went up in smoke, so let's go dusting for dirt! . . . I must be getting old, or something, cuz it's all I can do to keep barely ahead of a charge of buckshot aimed at me by . . but from the ridiculous to the sublime, here's a lil' ditty about Les Harmon's soup-strainer:

From the roots out to the tip.

We have our own mystery thrillers in Central, too . . . y' oughta hear th' yarn that Hally Henshaw tells about getting herself shut up in a easket, 'n' having to get "can-opened" out . . . and there we have Ronnie 'New Deal" McGaffin, as usual, trying to be a woman-hater, but for some reason always coming out second best in his wishes. His motto is: 'I'll turn my oughts to shalls." As far as women are concerned, his score s still zero (ought) . . . but, continuing, if I ever catch the miscreant (I guess that's what he'd be called) that put that noose in my box for my 'convenience." somethin' desperate will be done, depending on which one of us is the bigger . . . and from the Foreign Language department we find out that Hoenig, in German, means "honey"!

The Senior class also wished to add ts contribution to the "most beautiful English word" . . . it voted for paidinfull . . . Ross Cavaleri is now known as "The Tantalizer" . . . the reason is Eileen Anderson . . . it's still going on! Even our remarks couldn't stop that love affair on the second floor in front of the library after school . . . if y' don't know who it is, take a peek around the corner tonight, but don't let 'em see you . . . add anecdotes (or antidotes): Betty Henske still doesn't know whether the steak-fry was Friday night in- per cent. stead of Saturday night. But anyway, what could be nizzer than a steak-fry for two? . . . and have you ever noticed how embarrassed Sam Turkel can get when he pulls out the wrong nanky-the one with lip-stick on it? . . but the light's changed to green, into second, Marg Backstrom wishes to announce her newest lil' "Bright Sayings of Baby"-Buddha, can you spare a dime?

Current Cinema

Two comedians-one who cannot augh and the other who cannot cry -combine their comedy talents in 'What! No Beer?," starting at the World theater today, starring Buster Keaton and Jimmy Durante.

Alternating between excitement nd hilarious comedy, the picture centers around the current problem of legalized beer. Buster is a taxidermist and "Schnozzle" the town barber, but by accident they are involved in the operation of a wholesale brewery. They are not only caught between the wets and the drys on the beer question, but they are also between the fire of two beerrunning gangs who seek to control the output of their brewery.

The whole political panorama of the beer issue is covered in this story, from the recent election to the agitation in Congress over legalized beer. It is a timely picture, treated in a humorous mood, but with plenty of excitement in it. In the supporting cast are Phyllis Barry, John Miljan, and Roscoe Ates.

The second feature on the program will be Barbara Stanwyck in her latest screen offering, "Ladies They Talk About." This is the drama of women who live in the headlines, with Preston Foster and Lyle Talbot.

"Rasputin and the Empress," starring the royal family of stage and screen, Lionel, Ethel, and John Barrymore, started at the Paramount theater yesterday and continues all week at no advance in prices. This is the mysteriously fascinating story of Rasputin, uncrowned ruler of a dynasty-worshiped as a saint by Empress and Emperor-feared by man-superman in his hypnotic power over Lionel Barrymore plays Rasputin, with others in the cast besides John and Ethel including Ralph Morgan. Diana Wynward, and Ted Alexander.

Presented at popular prices beginning today, the Orpheum theater brings the world-famous Germanmade film "Maedchen in Uniform," which has had phenomenal runs in New York, Berlin, Paris, and London. It is simple, tender, wholesome, and different with a cast composed only of girls.

THE DRIFT FENCE By Zane Grey

THINGS are bound to happen to anyone who tries to put a fence on the free range, but when a tenderfoot attempts it there is trouble. When Jim Taft, late of St. Louis, became foreman of the Diamond gang of hostile cowboys and tried to make them build fences, he had everything against him. The cowboys did everything in their power to make things miserable for him, the homesteaders hated him for cutting up the range, turn of affairs. This novel is one of romance and danger, written in the usual straightforward style of Zane Grey. It portrays the death of the free range and the necessity for its end. It shows the gradual disappearance of the great cattle kings and the appearance of the smaller rancher. The book also pictures the end of the powerful bands of rustlers who stole cattle by the thousands. The period is one of transition from the great "Wild West" to the west of today.

The characterization is excellent. One can just see the tall, thin, bowlegged cowboys so superb on horseand a powerful band of rustlers who back and so clumsy on foot; and unwere being hindered by his fence con- derstand their resentment towards tinually cut it. Jim was just about to the tenderfoot foreman who wore give up when he met little Molly "store clothes." Although there is a Dunn of Cibeque, who brought about good deal of humor in the book, we feel rather sad to see the disappearance of the great free range.

April comes with arms aladen, Leads the way for Spring. Trips as lightly as a maiden, With each growing thing.

Buttercups and ferns like laces, Violets and grass, Dandelions lift their faces Watching April pass.

Babbling brooks and sudden showers, Tinkling, crystal rain Bringing leaves and radiant flowers. Spring is here again!

APRIL SHOWERS It's such a pleasant patter of the warm spring rain; It seems to whisper softly, "Spring is here again. I'll make the grasses greener, bring to blossom many

White Leghorns Bask Under Sunlamps in April's Scientific American

When biddy gets her ultra violet she lays more and better eggs, her output has greater hatchability, and she lives a healthier and longer life. An experiment was performed on 450 hens. Twelve sun lamps were installed in their pens and the pen beside them was equipped with ordinary incadescent lamps for early morning lighting. During the first two weeks, hens dependent solely on conventional light sources held about even with their irradiated neighbors. In another week however, the difference began to manifest itself and until the test ended two months later the irradiated hens produced a steadily rising ratio of more eggs per day than their less favored sisters. Moreover the sunlamped hens resisted disease better than those who were not.

America's Real Job in April's Scribner's

When the good ship Civilization in which we all embarked together begins to flounder in the terrific storm-what then? Should we try to readjust the menu between the first cabin and the steerage? There are many remedies suggested, but what we really need is a great deal more confidence in the future. After all, this depression is not nearly as severe as the panics of 1837 and 1873. Of course there are many new economic factors which must be considered, but the mass of us look on life with the "spoiled child" attitude; we have had our candy taken away so we must sit down and cry. The moment when our ship is threatened by the storm is not the time to draw blue prints of a better ship for the future. Blue prints and plans are necessary and useful to a certain extent, but along with them we must have action. Action and action alone will bring our ship safely through the storm.

Truth in Advertising in April's Atlantic Monthly Truth in advertising, who wants it? Would you buy a mouth wash that truthfully stated, "You may cure your halitosis-but your face is God given and if you think romance will ever come your way, you are very much mistaken?" Would you patronize a department store which advertised thus: "Parisian Styles -Imported from Jersey. They are really fine dresses worth every dollar you pay for them. But, my dear girl, no garment can turn a clothes rack into a Garbo. Look at yourself in the mirror. What can you expect?" Thousands of people buy reducers, soap, beauty aids, piano lessons, cigarettes, clothes, and all other articles after reading high-powered advertising. Advertisers have found that smart slogans and claim of exaggerated results will sell their products to the public. Such advertising is fundamentally based on truth but grossly exaggerated. It is hammered till the advertisers themselves believe the claims they make for their products. If people buy articles in search of romance, who are we to condemn the poor advertiser who really thinks the product will bring the desired the history of the Central High school library than Miss Zora Shields, present librarian, who has been connected with it from its beginning. She has watched, or has been responsible for, the growth of the collection from 100 books to 22,000 books and periodicals. She has seen it grow from one room to three. She has helped it progress from a small, rarely used ltbrary, to one of the best and most efficient high school libraries in the country.

Formerly in Room 117

Before 1915, Miss Shields relates, Central High school had what was called a library in Rooms 117 and 118. There were about one hundred books, badly torn and in poor condition, in the collection. No one was in charge, and the books were soon lost or destroyed. Miss Kate McHugh, principal at that time, used the socalled library as a reception room for parents.

"In 1915," Miss Shields explained, "I was offered Room 225, was given $500, two large tables, which are still in use today, no chairs, and no help, and I was told to begin a library-a real library. I had vacationed in the east that summer, and had visited a number of high school libraries. I discovered that their main difficulty in the organization of a library was to get students registered in a neat, orderly manner. I began to make my own plans accordingly.

Reference Books First

"We used to say we started the library on faith," Miss Shields laughed. over. I spent the first $500 on those sharp contrast with the 100 the liexpensive reference books that every given more money, I bought novels a day. that cost less because of inferior quality paper, cheap binding, and poor

Miss Shields taught three classes at that time and worked in the library the rest of the time. "The library was open only the periods that I was free," she said.

Uses Student Control

From the very first, Mrs. Catherine Blanchard, then a student, aided in the library. Miss Juliette Griffin, who now teaches history at Central, also g a library assistant.

Explaining the early connections of the library, Miss Shields said, "We were then a branch of the Omaha Public library. They did all our cataloging and mending for us. After a few years, however, they left us to shift for ourselves, and we hired Miss Miriam Clay of New York to do our cataloging. She stood with us three years, and when she left, Miss Crandall, who is still with us, came in."

Organized in 1915 with Two | The library has had students help ing for about five years, working on hall duty outside of Room 225, registering, and doing messenger duty. 'We used to register the students inside the east door of the library," Miss Shields added. "It caused so much confusion and was so noisy, that in 1928 we moved it outside.

The library now uses about thirtyfive student control members to act as messengers, typists, sorters, and menders. Three Central graduates, No person is a better authority on Doris Gudath '29, Ruth Chadwell '30, and Charlotte Root '24, are also employed.

Mr. Masters Gives 221

"In 1928, Mr. Masters gave us 221 to add to the library," Miss Shields declared. "This gave us more wall space, and we were able to add a few thousand books to our already rapidly growing collection." In 1931 22C was added to the library. "This was one of the greatest aids in keeping the library clean," she added, "for that gave us a special place where we could do all the necessary mending and pasting." The last major change in the library's makeup was made in the summer of 1932 when all pay collection books, the vertical files, the magazine case, and the encyclopedias were placed in 221.

Pay Collection Books

There are 150 to 200 books in the pay collection at present. These books are placed in the general collection when they have paid for themselves

Explaining the use of the colored slips and the guarded doors, the head librarian stated, "At first, we issued books exactly like the Public library does, but we lost about 400 books a year, and we absolutely had to change our system or go broke. We got the idea of the little colored slips from a Los Angeles book store about eight years ago, and we have used them ever since. Even with the guarded doors, we still lost an average of 100 books a vear." she continued.

According to the latest tabulations about 22,000 books and magazines "but it was faith enough to put us are in the library's collection - in brary started with. Average circulalibrary has to have. Then, when I was tion is now 400 books and periodicals

1933 1872 DOANE COLLEGE Crete, Nebraska

Established in 1872, Doane the oldest independent college in the state. These sixty maturing years have given character and stability.

Doane College is located at Crete, Nebr., in the beautiful Blue river valley, 26 miles southwest of Lincoln, on the main line of the Burlington from Omaha to Denver. Although the landscape of the campus is typically Nebraskan, there is much variety. The rolling hills and valleys, the cool spring and pergola, the little brook and bridges, the ponds and lake, the trees planted by the pioneers, the well-kept lawns and classic halls make this place an ideal home for college students.

If you are interested in a liberal arts college of the highest type at lower cost and only two hours from Omaha, direct any inquiry you may have to A. Eugene Haylett, Extension Secretary, or the President, Doane College, Crete, Nebr.

"PAPA" SCHMIDT thinks that he has discovered the cure for gum chewing. This annoying habit has disorganized many a class and aged many an instructor. His system boils itself down to four simple steps. The first time "Papa" merely embarrasses the wrong doer, the second time the culprit is asked to remove his gum, the third time he is given two eighth hours, and if he continues in his law breaking, he is dropped from the class role.

The following Saturday they cross the river to engage in the first dual contest of the season will be at Fremont Tuesday, April 25.

Practice During Vacation

Last Tuesday the team journeyed over to the Technical oval for time trials. No accurate checking was done, but anyone who wanted to run the 440 or 880 had an excellent opportunity to try out. Weather permitting, "Papa" plans on holding track practices Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of vacation. Team members are to meet at the gym at 12 o'clock on these days.

Hoff, Perkins, Veneziano, McGaffin, and Rich are out for the pole vault. Etter and Hughes are competing in the broad jump. Ogilvie and Hughes hurl the javelin, while Ogilvie, Elliot, Rosenbaum and Clark throw the discus. Tagg and Rosenbaum, veteran lettermen, are the class of the hurdlers.
